Committees Report On Food Drive, Sewing And Various Benefit Affairs.

KITCHEN TO BE ENLARGED

Seventy-two more members were enrolled in the Woman's auxiliary of the Arnie M. Warner hospital, at the regular February meeting, Monday afternoon. More than fifty members were present and Miss Mary Ramer, president, presided. The auxiliary members were informed that the hospital kitchen must be enlarged and the auxiliary voted to devote the proceeds of the next basketball game, in the Edgemoor Plank gymnasium, March 2, to this work. Mrs. F. R. Rowe is chairman of the committee in charge of the sale of tickets for the Evening vs. Charlestown, West Virginia, American Legion benefit game.

Two dozen knives, forks and spoons were purchased by the auxiliary and presented to the hospital. The treasurer reported total receipts of $355.45, expenditures of $9.75 and a balance in the treasury of $295.70.

Sewing Committee
The sewing committee reported completion of a number of sheets, caps, stockings, blankets, pillow slips, spreads, towels, etc.

The Community club of Littlestown announced the completion of 10 tray covers. The Littlestown dramatic club announced it would present a benefit play for the hospital March 5.

New draperies were ordered for the two rooms furnished by the American Legion auxiliary and Christ Lutheran church.

Mrs. M. E. Zinn, chairman of the food drive, reported a large quantity of foodstuffs collected for the hospital. The drive was conducted by fifteen units. A detailed report will be announced later.

The Homecraft club of the Y. W. C. A. reported proceeds of $8 from their benefit party and the Legion auxiliary reported profits of $19 from their benefit. The Rebecca Lodge contributed $5.

Miss Reba Adams, a former president of the auxiliary, spoke briefly at Monday's meeting.

$3,600 Blaze At Buena Vista Sunday

Fire of undetermined origin destroyed the large frame barn and two automobiles of John Greager, Buena Vista liveryman, Sunday morning about 3 o'clock. The loss, covered by insurance, was estimated at about $3,600.

When Mr. Greager discovered the fire he was too late to save the automobiles.

A call was sent to the Blue Ridge fire company, which responded immediately. Later the Waynesboro community pumper was hooked up to a cistern and water was thrown on nearby buildings. The Blue Ridge firemen also confined their efforts to saving adjacent buildings.

Jesse Thompson, chief of the Blue Ridge Summit department, received a burned arm.

Sparks flying across nearby residences caused alarm among the occupants, and house roofs soon became dotted with bucket brigades.

TWO BROTHERS IN LOCAL COURT

Two brothers were before Justice of the Peace John C. Shearer for preliminary hearings this morning. Ernest Carey, Biglerville, charged with surety of the peace, was discharged after Mrs. George Mummett, his daughter, and prosecutor in the case, withdrew the information. Carey paid costs amounting to $13.85.

Carey was arrested last Saturday by state police and Constable Charles H. Wilson. Mrs. Mummett alleged that Carey threatened her with a knife while under the influence of liquor.

Carey's brother, Calvin, of Berlin Junction, arrested last week for non-support of minor children, was held for court at this morning's hearing.

COUNTY BANKER ON COMMITTEE

Lloyd W. Kuhn, Bendersville, Is Honored By Group 5 Of State Bankers.

Lloyd W. Kuhn, cashier of the Bendersville National bank, was elected a member of the executive committee of group 5 of the Pennsylvania Bankers' association at their annual meeting in Harrisburg, Monday. A number of Adams county bankers attended the conference. Optimism regarding federal aid to financial institutions was voiced by several speakers. There were 500 representatives of the 206 financial institutions in the group, covering Central Pennsylvania counties, present.

Alvin R. Nissly, president of the People's bank, of Hanover, was elected chairman of the group. S. C. Stecher, cashier of the Hershey National bank, retiring, chairman, was elected to the council of administration. Harry S. Smeltzer, president of the Keystone Trust company, Harrisburg, was re-elected secretary and treasurer for the twelfth time.

Executive Committee
Other members of the executive committee elected were: George S. McLean, chairman, cashier of First National bank, Shippensburg; Alvin W. Mentzer, vice president of Denver National bank, Denver; Edwin Hoffman, vice president of First National bank, Mercersburg; Thomas Mock, cashier of First National bank, of Schaffersburg; W. Grant Rauch, vice president of Commonwealth Trust company, Harrisburg, and J. Bruce Davis, cashier of Redwood National bank.

The various phases of proposed legislation to ease the financial condition of the country were explained by C. F. Zimmerman, secretary of the Pennsylvania Bankers' Association.

SCHOOL BAND AT P. T. MEETING

Biglerville Parent-Teachers To Hear Novelty Band At Wednesday's Session.

A feature of the Biglerville Parent-Teachers' meeting to be held in the community hall Wednesday evening will be the initial appearance of the rhythm band which has been organized by Miss Maybelle Snider, Mrs. Lillie Aughinbaugh, Mrs. Rudolph Rosenstengel, Mrs. Laura Sheads, Mrs. F. Wraybright, Mrs. Mervin Bream, Mrs. C. Ray Rupp, Mrs. C. Tyson Tipton, Miss Ellen Tipton, Mrs. Charles C. Culp.

The band which will appear in uniform will be led by George Houck, one of the pupils. The personnel includes the following boys and girls from the three grades: Triangles, Paul Hawkins, Dorothy Stenert, Betty Lupp and Donald Shetter; bells, Gladys Chronister, Robert Garretson, Freda Kane, Vivienne Rebert, Isabel Mitchell, Leonard Arnold, Yvonne Pyles and Helen Welker; sand blocks, Junior Raffensperger and Fred Raffensperger; cymbals, Dean Carey; wood on blocks, Jack Miller and Donald Coddington; sticks, Janet Garretson, Carl Taylor, Bobby Bringham, Lorraine Kapp, Nancy Raffensperger, Viola Cool, Dorothy Brunk, Marietta Warner and Jean Shue.

Miss Lady and Miss Lower are planning to organize a second band later in the year to include all pupils not belonging to the present one.

CAR BURNS; 4 ESCAPE

De Valera Will Be New President of Ireland

Head Of Fianna Fail Who Served Term In Prison Wins Majority Of Seats.

Dublin, Feb. 23 (AP).—Eamon de Valera's Fianna Fail and its labor allies had won seventy-seven seats in the new Dail, as against sixty-eight for the government party of President William T. Cosgrave and its supporters in complete returns from last week's election, except for seven districts in which the voting was postponed.

The Fianna Fail took sixty-eight seats, Labor and Independent Labor nine, the government fifty-three, the independents and farmers fifteen. Thus De Valera's own party, regardless of labor support, exactly balanced in strength the presumed followers of President Cosgrave.

De Valera is 53. The strenuous and victorious campaign sent the fiery De Valera, leader of the Irish republicans, to bed with a cold Monday but not until he had hailed "a new era of peace and prosperity for Ireland."

The condition of the Fianna Fail leader was declared not serious by his physician, who said a day or so in bed should conquer his ailment. De Valera told the Associated Press that he intended to pursue, if asked to form a new government, his campaign policies. He said: "A new era has dawned before Ireland. An era in which the Irish people will enjoy a peace and prosperity so long denied them. The only way to avoid misunderstanding and bring about the oath to the king and that is what I intend to do."

President Cosgrave said he was unperturbed over the De Valera victory and would give support to the Fianna Fail as long as its policies were beneficial to Ireland.

Thirteen candidates were named Monday to contest the seven constituencies in Leitrim county on March 3. The Leitrim voting was postponed after a government candidate and a detective were slain in the campaign. Mrs. May Reynolds, widow of the slain candidate, has been nominated government candidate in his stead.

INITIATE TEN INTO A. T. O. FRAT

Banquet Will Be Held At Fraternity Home On N. Washington Street Tonight.

Ten pledges will be initiated into Alpha Upsilon chapter of Alpha Tau Omega fraternity at Gettysburg college this evening after a banquet at the chapter house on North Washington street.

Dr. John B. Zinn, head of the chemistry department at the college, will be the toastmaster, and Dr. Robert Fortenbaugh, head of the history department, and C. E. Bihelmer, athletic director at the college, will be among the speakers.

Stanley B. Gulick, president of the chapter, will speak on behalf of the fraternity and Jean H. Reed, of Shamokin, one of the pledges, will talk for the others in the class. Besides Reed, other students to be initiated include George Van Houten, of Franklin, New Jersey; Leslie S. Guy, Pittsburgh; Emil H. Samph and Powell S. Thomas, both of Philadelphia; John Chenoweth, Taneytown; Clifford Gunnet, York; Conrad D. Hummel, Easton; Busset J. Roberts, Harrisburg, and Robert Schiebel, Hanover.

If She Could Just Go Fishing With Presidential Candidates

New York, Feb. 23 (AP).—If she could just go fishing with some of the democratic candidates, Elizabeth Marbury, 75-year-old national democratic committeewoman, is sure she could tell which ones "are any good."

"If I'd been a man, I'd probably have been president," she said, "I'm so crazy about fishing."

Sometimes called "The Old Lady of Manhattan," Elizabeth Marbury must be reckoned with in politics. She will go to Chicago in June as leader of the New York committee-women and probably delegate-at-large.

She has wealthy, social position, backing of Tammany, and an amazing acquaintance, including gangsters as well as the bluebloods of many countries. And she has a sense of humor.

"I get more laughs out of politics than out of any show on Broadway," she said today. "I am resting up for a lot of laughing. Just one democratic convention is enough fun to last four years."

Former Student Here Sought; Mother Dying

Mt. Carmel, Feb. 23 (AP).—The search for Albert Strauss, 28, former student at Gettysburg college, who left here last Tuesday to start work as assistant engineer with the state department of property and supplies in Harrisburg, was intensified today as his mother lay dying.

A report of $500 was offered by his wife for information concerning his whereabouts. Mrs. Elias Strauss, mother of the missing man, was in a critical condition today, physicians said.

Strauss' automobile was found in a Harrisburg garage, but he did not report for work.

Mrs. Emma McCans Dies Last Midnight

Mrs. Emma Catharine McCans, 60, of South Middletown township, Cumberland county, died at midnight last night from a complication of diseases.

She is survived by her husband, Fred McCans; one son, John, at home; two sisters, Mrs. Flora Funt and Mrs. Ross Crum, and two brothers, David Horner and George Horner, all of Brysonia. Two grandchildren also survive.

Funeral services Thursday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock from the home with further services at the United Brethren church, the Rev. W. K. Hosterman, assisted by the Rev. Ira W. Trostel, officiating. Burial in the cemetery adjoining the church.

2 Brysonia Pupils Are Ill With Fever

Two pupils at Brysonia school are ill with scarlet fever and their homes have been quarantined by John Deatrick, health officer. The pupils ill with the malady are Dorothy Jane Knox, 8, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Knox, Menallen township, and Robert Taylor, 6, son of Mr. and Mrs. George P. Taylor, also of Menallen township.

Submits Report Before Educators

Prof. Fred E. Kelly, of the department of education, Gettysburg college, today submitted a report on his findings during a survey of expert opinion relative to visual instruction in teacher training, before the annual meeting of the National Academy of Visual Instruction held in conjunction with the convention of the National Education Association in Washington.

Professor Kelly conducted a survey of expert opinion regarding the value of visual instruction in teacher training and was assigned to submit his report before the academy today.

The meeting of the National Academy of Visual Instruction will discuss the problems pertinent to this subject.

While in Washington Professor Kelly will also work on his doctor's dissertation on teacher training in visual instruction which he expects to conclude in the near future.

$512 ACTION STARTED HERE

Well-drillers Seek To Recover Amount On Verbal Contract With Orrtanna Man.

An action to recover $512 on an alleged verbal contract for the digging of a well for James E. Riggeal, Orrtanna, was instituted today in the office of S. L. Allison, prothonotary, by Curtis A. Cromwell and Roy A. Hiner, an Adams county firm of well-drillers.

According to the statement of claim, filed on behalf of the plaintiffs by Robert E. Wible and Eugene V. Buleit, Gettysburg attorneys-at-law, Cromwell and Hiner sank a shaft 335 feet at Riggeal's home at a contract price of $2 a foot.

Riggeal paid $160 on the bill, the statement avers, but has failed to pay the remainder. The work was done during 1931.

Elvin Smith, of Fountain Dale, signed a plea of guilty to a charge of operating a car while under the influence of liquor when arraigned before Justice of the Peace John C. Shearer Monday evening. Smith posted $500 bail for his appearance at the April term of court.

Smith's machine is said by state highway motor patrolmen to have struck the rear end of the parked car of Harry M. Mathews, of Hagerstown, at Fountain Dale Sunday evening.

GIRL HELD IN COUNTY JAIL

Ruth McKendrick, 19, To Face Sentence Here; Father And Brother Removed.

Bernard McKendrick and his son, John, of Waynesboro, and Glenn Warren, of Hamilton township, were taken to the Franklin county jail at Chambersburg from the Adams county jail here, Monday, by state police from Chambersburg.

Ruth McKendrick, 19, was left in custody at the local jail because Franklin county authorities have no charges against her.

In court here last Saturday, Judge Donald P. McPherson deferred sentence on the four and they were re-committed to jail. The court is expected to dispose of the McKendrick girl's case when it sits again.

Adams county authorities have lodged detainees against the McKendricks and Warren in Franklin county. They are wanted in this county on two charges of breaking, entering and larceny.

Postal Workers Attend Banquet At Waynesboro

A delegation of Gettysburg post-office employees, including Postmaster John Eckert, attended a banquet held by the Cumberland Valley postal employees association at Waynesboro, Monday evening. Some of the Gettysburg delegation were accompanied by their wives.

Besides Postmaster Eckert, those from Gettysburg included George P. Black, assistant postmaster; Norton Miller, Samuel Waltman, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pfeiffer, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. McCullough, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Weikert and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Heltzel.

Ralph Miller, postmaster at New Oxford, also was in attendance.

COUNTY FARM BRINGS $9,600

Deardorff Property, 176 Acres, North Of Mummaburg, Sold At Sale.

The valuable fruit farm of the late Luther L. Deardorff, one mile north of Mummaburg, was sold to Frank B. Deardorff, West Middle street, for $9,600 at public sale last Saturday afternoon. The Gettysburg National bank, administrator of Deardorff's estate, conducted the sale.

The farm, containing about 176 acres, has 100 acres in apple, peach, cherry, plum and pear trees. The farm is improved with a large barn, packing shed and two-story frame house with all modern improvements.

Mr. Deardorff also purchased a property in Mummaburg for $320. The tract in Mummaburg contains about three-quarters of an acre and is improved with a two-story brick dwelling.

Two timber tracts, one in Franklin township, containing three acres, and another in Menallen township, containing about eight acres, were bought by S. McC. and C. M. Eicholtz. For the Franklin township tract the price was $100, while the Eicholtz brothers paid $250 for the Menallen township tract.

Personal property of the late Mr. Deardorff will be sold on March 17.

Chinese Repulse Japanese Attack and Tokio Decides To Double Shanghai Force

Tokio, Feb. 23 (AP).—The Japanese government decided tonight to double the strength of its army at Shanghai in the face of reports that the Chinese defenders of the city had successfully stopped the Japanese attack.

The Japanese army now at Shanghai is estimated at 25,000 men so that with the new reinforcements the army would be increased to 50,000, about 10,000 more men than the Chinese have on the Shanghai front.

Big Push Fails
Shanghai, Wednesday, Feb. 24 (AP).—Japanese headquarters admitted early today that the terrific onslaught against Kiangwan had failed to dislodge the defenders and that it appeared the Chinese were capable of holding out for a long time.

Thus 96 hours of the heaviest fighting since the World war has left the two opposing armies just about where they stood last Saturday when the Chinese rejected an ultimatum and the Japanese launched their offensive.

"Our men are tired and they need some rest," said a Japanese spokesman.

China Upsets Japs
Shanghai, Feb. 23, Copyright by AP.—Shanghai's dogged Chinese defenders fought a succession of slashing Japanese attacks to a standstill today along the entire battlefield from Chapel to some distance beyond Kiangwan, meeting every terrific drive with death-dealing bullets and bayonets.

The fighting died down as darkness came on after 12 daylight hours.

SUIT FOR $750 BEGUN IN YORK

Western National Bank Begins Action Against County Man.

The Western National bank, of York, guardian of Elwood O. Shank, of York, today filed suit in York on behalf of its ward against Wilmer Bream, near Biglerville, seeking damages of $750.

The action was brought as the result of a collision between the automobile of Bream, driven by Glenn Freed, Biglerville, and the motorcycle driven by Shank on Buford avenue on the evening of Labor Day, September 7, 1931.

Shank's mother, Mrs. Stella Shank, York, who was riding in the cycle's sidecar, was the most seriously injured, and she was admitted as a patient to the Warner hospital.

Freed, who was accompanied by Norman Lawver, Biglerville, was turning into a service station when he ran into Shank's motorcycle.

Shank was recently adjudged a person of weak mind; and the Western National bank was appointed his guardian.

Bream had loaned his car to Freed, his nephew, on the night of the accident.

First National Bank And Citizens' Trust To Consolidate Soon

Directors Of Two Financial Institutions Authorize First Step At Meetings Held Today; Negotiations Under Way For Several Years.

DATE OF TRANSFER WILL BE ANNOUNCED IN NEAR FUTURE

At meetings of the boards of directors of the Citizens' Trust company and the First National bank of Gettysburg today the first step in the consolidation of the two banks was authorized. Agreements covering the transaction were executed.

This action is the result of negotiations between the two boards covering a period of several years.

The consolidation is to be brought about through a plan of absorption of the Trust company by the First National bank.

It is understood that the assets of the Trust company will be transferred to the First National bank, and that the latter assumes all deposit liabilities of the Trust company.

$275,000 Capital
The exact date of the final transfer has not been announced. It is understood that the stockholders of the Trust company will have the privilege of purchasing stock of the

First National bank in place of the Trust company shares they now hold, the exact basis of such sale to be announced as soon as the stockholders of the First National have authorized the necessary increase of stock for that purpose.

The capital of the First National bank is now $150,000 while that of the Citizens' Trust company is $125,000.

The combined capital of the two institutions under the National bank's charter will be approximately $275,000 with a combined surplus of approximately the same amount which will make it one of the largest and strongest financial institutions in this part of the state.

The Citizens' Trust company, on April 1, 1904, succeeded the Citizens' bank, a state institution, which had been opened here for three years. The charter for the Trust company was granted by the state on February 18, 1904, and on April 1, 1904, the Citizens' Trust company began business in the Wills building, center square, now owned by P. W. Stalmsmith, and where the latter has his drug store.

During 1904, the Trust company erected its present banking house on Baltimore street, and moved there in January, 1905.

Harry L. Snyder, president of the Citizens' Trust company, has been affiliated with the bank since March 1, 1904.

The First National bank succeeded a state bank in 1864, eight years after the state bank was chartered. Edmund W. Thomas, its president, came to Gettysburg as vice president of the bank in June, 1919, and succeeded to the presidency in January, 1928.

The name of the merged institution will be The First National Bank of Gettysburg.

No date has been set for the merging of the physical assets of the two banks.

Head Of Lions Is Guest Here

Julien C. Hyer, of Fort Worth, Texas, president of Lions' International, was the guest of honor at a luncheon at the Hotel Gettysburg at 12:45 o'clock this afternoon.

Mr. Hyer came to Gettysburg from Harrisburg where he was met by Richard F. Simmons, of Frederick, district governor of Maryland Lions' clubs, and several other members of the Frederick Lions' club.

Upon his arrival here, Mr. Hyer was greeted by Dr. W. E. Tilberg, dean at Gettysburg college, president of the Gettysburg Lions' club, and several other members of the local club.

Immediately after the luncheon, Mr. Hyer left for Frederick where a banquet in his honor will be held this evening. A number of Gettysburg Lions are planning to attend the banquet.

Noted Pilot Is Kidnapped And Then Released

St. Louis, Feb. 24 (AP).—Police announced today that they had received a telephone call from Mrs. Forest O'Brien, wife of the holder of the world's air endurance record, saying he was kidnapped early today but later she reported he was safe. The kidnapping was a mistake, she said.

LOCAL HOME RAIDED
Upon information received, state and local police raided the home of Russell Frazer, South Washington street, at 10 o'clock Monday evening. The officers had reports that alleged beer and liquor were being dispensed there, but they were unable to find any contraband.

For Rent: House in Orrtanna. Mrs. Laura Hunschman.

INITIATE TEN INTO A. T. O. FRAT

Ten pledges will be initiated into Alpha Upsilon chapter of Alpha Tau Omega fraternity at Gettysburg college this evening after a banquet at the chapter house on North Washington street.

Dr. John B. Zinn, head of the chemistry department at the college, will be the toastmaster, and Dr. Robert Fortenbaugh, head of the history department, and C. E. Bilheimer, athletic director at the college, will be among the speakers.

Stanley B. Gulick, president of the chapter, will speak on behalf of the fraternity and Jean H. Reed, of Shamokin, one of the pledges, will talk for the others in the class.

Besides Reed, other students to be initiated include George Van Houten, of Franklin, New Jersey; Leslie S. Guy, Pittsburgh; Emil H. Samph and Powell S. Thomas, both of Philadelphia; John Chenoweth, Taneytown; Clifford Gunnet, York; Conrad D. Hummel, Easton; Bisset J. Roberts, Harrisburg, and Robert Schiebel, Hanover.

If She Could Just Go Fishing With Presidential Candidates

New York, Feb. 23 (AP)—If she could just go fishing with some of the democratic candidates, Elizabeth Marbury, 75-year-old national democratic committeewoman, is sure she could tell which ones "are any good."

"If I'd been a man, I'd probably have been president," she said, "I'm so crazy about fishing."

Sometimes called "The Old Lady of Manhattan," Elizabeth Marbury must be reckoned with in politics. She will go to Chicago in June as leader of the New York committee-women and probably delegate-at-large.

She has wealth, social position, backing of Tammany, and an amazing acquaintance, including gangsters as well as the bluebloods of many countries. And she has a sense of humor.

"I get more laughs out of politics than out of any show on Broadway," she said today. "I am resting up for a lot of laughing. Just one democratic convention is enough fun to last four years."

She told the democratic leaders this year they ought to get a younger committeewoman, who "wouldn't be so frivolous." But they wouldn't listen.

She said she would be for the candidate who "makes the fewest mistakes between now and June."

Former Student Here Sought; Mother Dying

Mt. Carmel, Feb. 23 (AP)—The search for Albert Strauss, 28, former student at Gettysburg college, who left here last Tuesday to start work as assistant engineer with the state department of property and supplies in Harrisburg, was intensified today as his mother lay dying.

A report of $500 was offered by his wife for information concerning his whereabouts. Mrs. Elias Strauss, mother of the missing man, was in a critical condition today, physicians said.

Strauss's automobile was found in a Harrisburg garage, but he did not report for work.

Mrs. Emma McCans Dies Last Midnight

Mrs. Emma Catharine McCans, 60, of South Middletown township, Cumberland county, died at midnight last night from a complication of diseases.

She is survived by her husband, Fred McCans; one son, John, at home; two sisters, Mrs. Flora Funt and Mrs. Rosa Crum, and two brothers, David Horner and George Horner, all of Brysonia. Two grandchildren also survive.

Funeral services Thursday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock from the home with further services at the Urah United Brethren church, the Rev. W. K. Hosterman, assisted by the Rev. Ira W. Trostel, officiating. Burial in the cemetery adjoining the church.

Postal Workers Attend Banquet At Waynesboro

A delegation of Gettysburg post-office employees, including Postmaster John Eckert, attended a banquet held by the Cumberland Valley postal employees association at Waynesboro, Monday evening. Some of the Gettysburg delegation were accompanied by their wives.

Besides Postmaster Eckert, those from Gettysburg included George P. Black, assistant postmaster; Norton Miller, Samuel Waltman, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pfeiffer, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. McCullough, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Welkert and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Heltzel.

Ralph Miller, postmaster at New Oxford, also was in attendance.

Submits Report Before Educators

Prof. Fred E. Kelly, of the department of education, Gettysburg college, today submitted a report on his findings during a survey of expert opinion relative to visual instruction in teacher training, before the annual meeting of the National Academy of Visual Instruction held in conjunction with the convention of the National Education Association in Washington.

Professor Kelly conducted a survey of expert opinion regarding the value of visual instruction in teacher training and was assigned to submit his report before the academy today.

The meeting of the National Academy of Visual Instruction will discuss the problems pertinent to this subject.

While in Washington Professor Kelly will also work on his doctor's dissertation on teacher training in visual instruction which he expects to conclude in the near future.

$512 ACTION STARTED HERE

Well-drillers Seek To Recover Amount On Vernal Contract With Orrtanna Man.

An action to recover $512 on an alleged verbal contract for the digging of a well for James E. Riggeal, Orrtanna, was instituted today in the office of S. L. Allison, prothonotary, by Curtis A. Cromwell and Roy A. Hiner, an Adams county firm of well-drillers.

According to the statement of claim, filed on behalf of the plaintiffs by Robert E. Wible and Eugene V. Bullett, Gettysburg attorneys-at-law, Cromwell and Hiner sank a shaft 336 feet at Riggeal's home at a contract price of $2 a foot.

Riggeal paid $160 on the bill, the statement avers, but has failed to pay the remainder. The work was done during 1931.

Admits Driving Automobile Under Influence Of Liquor

Elvin Smith, of Fountain Dale, signed a plea of guilty to a charge of operating a car while under the influence of liquor when arraigned before Justice of the Peace John C. Shealer Monday evening. Smith posted $500 bail for his appearance at the April term of court.

Smith's machine is said by state highway patrolmen to have struck the rear end of the parked car of Harry M. Mathews, of Hagerstown, at Fountain Dale Sunday evening.

GIRL HELD IN COUNTY JAIL

Ruth McKendrick, 19, To Face Sentence Here; Father And Brother Removed.

Bernard McKendrick and his son, John, of Waynesboro, and Glenn Warren, of Hamilton township, were taken to the Franklin county jail at Chambersburg from the Adams county jail here, Monday, by state police from Chambersburg.

Ruth McKendrick, 19, was left in custody at the local jail because Franklin county authorities have no charges against her.

In court here last Saturday, Judge Donald P. McPherson deferred sentence on the four and they were re-committed to jail. The court is expected to dispose of the McKendrick girl's case when it sits again.

Adams county authorities have lodged detainees against the McKendricks and Warren in Franklin county. They are wanted in this county on two charges of breaking, entering and larceny.

COUNTY FARM BRINGS $9,600

Deardorff Property, 176 Acres, North Of Mummaburg, Sold At Sale.

The valuable fruit farm of the late Luther L. Deardorff, one mile north of Mummaburg, was sold to Frank B. Deardorff, West Middle street, for $9,600 at public sale last Saturday afternoon. The Gettysburg National bank, administrator of Deardorff's estate, conducted the sale.

The farm, containing about 176 acres, has 100 acres in apple, peach, cherry, plum and pear trees. The farm is improved with a large barn, packing shed and two-story frame house with all modern improvements.

Mr. Deardorff also purchased a property in Mummaburg for $320. The tract in Mummaburg contains about three-quarters of an acre and is improved with a two-story brick dwelling.

Two timber tracts, one in Franklin township, containing three acres, and another in Menallen township, containing about eight acres, were bought by S. McC. and C. M. Eicholtz. For the Franklin township tract the price was $100, while the Eicholtz brothers paid $250 for the Menallen township tract.

Personal property of the late Mr. Deardorff will be sold on March 17.

First National Bank And Citizens' Trust To Consolidate Soon

Directors Of Two Financial Institutions Authorize First Step At Meetings Held Today; Negotiations Under Way For Several Years.

DATE OF TRANSFER WILL BE ANNOUNCED IN NEAR FUTURE

At meetings of the boards of directors of the Citizens' Trust company and the First National bank of Gettysburg today the first step in the consolidation of the two banks was authorized. Agreements covering the transaction were executed.

This action is the result of negotiations between the two boards covering a period of several years.

The consolidation is to be brought about through a plan of absorption of the Trust company by the First National bank.

It is understood that the assets of the Trust company will be transferred to the First National bank, and that the latter assumes all deposit liabilities of the Trust company.

$275,000 Capital
The exact date of the final transfer has not been announced. It is understood that the stockholders of the Trust company will have the privilege of purchasing stock of the

First National bank in place of the Trust company shares they now hold, the exact basis of such sale to be announced as soon as the stockholders of the First National have authorized the necessary increase of stock for that purpose.

The capital of the First National bank is now $150,000 while that of the Citizens' Trust company is $125,000.

The combined capital of the two institutions under the National bank's charter will be approximately $275,000 with a combined surplus of approximately the same amount which will make it one of the largest and strongest financial institutions in this part of the state.

The Citizens' Trust company, on April 1, 1904, succeeded the Citizens' bank, a state institution, which had been opened here for three years. The charter for the Trust company was granted by the state on February 18, 1904, and on April 1, 1904, the Citizens' Trust company began business in the Wills building, center square, now owned by P. W. Stalmsmith, and where the latter has his drug store.

During 1904, the Trust company erected its present banking house on Baltimore street, and moved there in January, 1905.

Harry J. Snyder, president of the Citizens' Trust company, has been affiliated with the bank since March 1, 1904.

The First National bank succeeded a state bank in 1904, eight years after the state bank was chartered.

Edmund W. Thomas, its president, came to Gettysburg as vice president of the bank in June, 1919, and succeeded to the presidency in January, 1928.

The name of the merged institution will be The First National Bank of Gettysburg.

No date has been set for the merging of the physical assets of the two banks.

SPECIAL CHURCH SERVICES HELD MONDAY EVENING

A scholarly discourse on the life of George Washington by the Very Rev. Oscar F. R. Treder, dean of St. Stephen's cathedral, Harrisburg, featured a special Washington's birthday anniversary service in Prince of Peace Episcopal church, Baltimore street, Monday evening.

The church was crowded for the service which was in charge of the Rev. Thurlow W. Null, vicar of the local church.

Rev. Dr. Treder discussed Washington as a Christian and a churchman, and thrilled his audience with his keen knowledge of the first president's life.

The office of choral evensong, one of the services of the Episcopal church which Washington enjoyed, was conducted by the Rev. John William Mulder, S. T. M., of Lancaster. Music was furnished by a vested boys' choir from the Lancaster church.

Members Of Lodge Visit Order Here

Eighteen members of Latimore council, 696, Order of Independent Americans, paid a fraternal visit to Battlefield council, 717, Monday evening. After a business meeting, a series of indoor baseball games was played between teams of both councils. Afterward refreshments were served.

On Wednesday evening Ladies' Night and open house will be observed by Latimore council.

Next Wednesday evening Ladies' Night will be observed by Battlefield council at 7 o'clock.

REMOVED TO HOSPITAL

Charles H. Wasson, 59, of Ohio, whose feet were badly frost-bitten last Thursday night, when he slept in a straw stack, was removed to the Warner hospital from the Adams county home today.

Head Of Lions Is Guest Here

Julien C. Hyer, of Fort Worth, Texas, president of Lions' International, was the guest of honor at a luncheon at the Hotel Gettysburg at 12:45 o'clock this afternoon.

Mr. Hyer came to Gettysburg from Harrisburg where he was met by Richard P. Simmons, of Frederick, district governor of Maryland Lions' clubs, and several other members of the Frederick Lions' club.

Upon his arrival here, Mr. Hyer was greeted by Dr. W. E. Tilberg, dean at Gettysburg college, president of the Gettysburg Lions' club, and several other members of the local club.

Immediately after the luncheon, Mr. Hyer left for Frederick where a banquet in his honor will be held this evening. A number of Gettysburg Lions are planning to attend the banquet.

Noted Pilot Is Kidnapped And Then Released

St. Louis, Feb. 24 (AP)—Police announced today that they had received a telephone call from Mrs. Forest O'Brien, wife of the holder of the world's air endurance record, saying he was kidnapped early today but later she reported he was safe. The kidnapping was a mistake, she said.

LOCAL HOME RAIDED

Upon information received, state and local police raided the home of Russell Frazer, South Washington street, at 10 o'clock Monday evening. The officers had reports that alleged beer and liquor were being dispensed there, but they were unable to find any contraband.

Ritchie Predicts Democratic Victory

Detroit, Feb. 23 (AP)—Governor Ritchie, of Maryland, told a mass-meeting of democrats here Monday night "the democratic hosts are on the march" and "their goal is victory they cannot, they will not, be denied."

Accusing the republican party of a lack of vision, understanding and alert leadership and asserting its economic policies "largely contributed to the overwhelming catastrophe suffered by the business men and farmers of America," Maryland's candidate for the democratic nomination for president declared that "all over the United States the people are turning to the democratic party as their authentic voice. Our party is the party of the future."

Governor Ritchie said President Hoover and his supporters in the campaign of 1928 failed to repudiate "the conditions brought about by members of their party who had been false to their oaths of office. They became beneficiaries of the cash contributions to the treasury of the republican party made by those who had been conspiring with public officials to loot the public asses."

HITLER SEEKS PRESIDENCY

German Fascists' Leader Selected To Oppose President Von Hindenburg.

Berlin, Feb. 23 (AP)—Adolf Hitler, leader of Germany's Nazis, will be the presidential candidate of his National Socialist party in the coming election, a party meeting was told Monday night by his lieutenant, Joseph Goebbels.

His aide's announcement, made to a gathering of the fiery Fascist's followers in the Sports Palace, set the political party alignments for the campaign in clean-cut array.

Three Oppose Von Hindenburg President Paul von Hindenburg, as a result, is faced with three opposition candidates in his campaign for re-election. But the failure of the Rightists to agree on a joint candidate may prove their undoing.

The certain runners in the race against the veteran of the war who is the incumbent are Hitler, Ernst Thaelmann, Communist nominee, and Theodore Duestenberg, the Nationalist candidate who is vice president of the Steel Helmets, an organization of war veterans.

Sought Joint Candidate Before Duestenberg and Hitler were brought out as candidates, the Nationalists and the Nazis, whose interests heretofore have been closely linked, held long conferences looking toward a joint candidate to put in the running against President von Hindenburg. At the end of the conferences it was apparent the Nazis had decided to put up a simple pure Hitlerite.

Herr Goebbels' announcement that Hitler himself would be the nominee was greeted with a storm of cheers and thunderous shouts of "hail" that lasted for many minutes. Hitler was not at the meeting.

Roosevelt Group Hint State Plot

Harrisburg, Feb. 23. — Charges were made here Monday at a meeting of the recently organized Roosevelt-for-President league of Pennsylvania, that John R. Collins, democratic state chairman, is furthering the delegate fight here for former Governor Smith for the sole purpose of blocking Governor Roosevelt's chances and thus "obtaining control of the Pennsylvania delegation for trading purposes" at the Chicago convention.

James F. Lavery, county chairman of Erie, in a telegram to Warren Vandye, president of the league, said that Collins told him January 29 that he and Sedgewick Kistler, national committeeman, had gone to New York to get Smith's consent for the use of his name in the Pennsylvania primary and that Smith had refused to give it.

"But they are going to run Smith anyway without his consent," Lavery asserted. "Collins further told us Smith could not possibly be nominated at Chicago, but they were going to use him in Pennsylvania to stop Roosevelt."

Countians Home From Long Tour

Calvin Hoffman, of Quaker Valley, returned recently from a trip to Florida and other southern points which he took as a member of the Pennsylvania Farmers' tour.

The party, comprising sixty-four men and women, left January 29 from Harrisburg by rail to Florida. From there it went by water to Cuba, Panama, through the Panama canal to Honduras and back to Florida, having spent nine and a half days on water. The members of the party returned home last week.

Three other residents of Adams county, Dr. and Mrs. Albert Woerner, of Cashtown, and Mrs. Eliza Myers, of York Springs, were included in the party.

LICENSE IS SUSPENDED Melvin Harmon, Gettysburg R. 5, had his driver's license suspended by the bureau of motor vehicles.

LEAGUE GAME ON WEDNESDAY

Bullets Meet Scrappy Albright Passers In Local Gymnasium Tomorrow.

Doggedly pursuing the leaders in the Eastern Pennsylvania collegiate basketball league from the third place post the revamped and scrappy Albright quintet, of Reading, face the battle-scarred Bullet dribblers of Gettysburg college, in the Eddie Plank gymnasium, Wednesday night.

Albright is in third place after a stubborn uphill scrap in the college cage loop. They are reported to be in fine fettle for the G-burg battle here tomorrow night and are confident of jolting the Bream-coached aggregation who in all probability will again be without the services of their pilot, Captain Raber Seely.

Seely was discharged from the Annie M. Warner hospital on Sunday but was sent direct to the college infirmary where he is still under the care of the team physician. It is not known, definitely, whether he will be permitted to play in Wednesday's tilt. If not he will be replaced by Johnny Howard, who will jump center. Buohl will be shifted from the tap-off post to forward with Dracha and Oikewicz and Jones will do the heavy defense work.

Franklin and Marshall's victory over Ursinus, Saturday night, gave them a game and one-half margin over the Bullets. The Lancasters have played one more league game than the Bullets. This margin will not be equaled until March 1 when the Bullets engage Lebanon Valley and the Possums will be idle.

The preliminary tilt will find the York Collegiate institute battling the Bullet freshmen.

Butler Farmers To Meet Friday

For the purpose of discussing with farmers of Butler township the testing of cattle for bovine tuberculosis eradication, a public meeting has been called for Friday evening, at 7:45 o'clock at Good Hope school, M. T. Hartman, Adams county farm agent, announced today. Invitations to attend have gone out to 139 farmers in Butler township, but all who have not received an invitation are urged to attend.

No effort will be made at the meeting to sign up the farmers for the tuberculosis tests, the idea being simply to outline similar work being done elsewhere in the county. Sixty-day re-tests of reactors in herds in Latimore and Menallen townships, were initial tuberculosis tests have been given, are being made this week.

One Still, a Rifle and a Pair Of Handcuffs.. Zip!...Escape

Somewhere in the fastnesses of the hills surrounding Emmitsburg is a man supposedly wearing handcuffs who escaped from officers following his arrest on a charge of operating a still.

The story of the arrest of Nelson Beall, alleged operator of a still and his subsequent escape, is interwoven with supposed efforts of rival bootleggers to wreck the still which Beall is alleged to have owned.

The still was located in a dilapidated house near the farm of John Butler, a negro, one mile north of Emmitsburg, on the Gettysburg road.

Late one night recently, Butler was aroused by what he believed was noise being made by men attempting to wreck Beall's still. Beall, who was sleeping at the negro's house that night, was slow to wake up, and when he finally roused himself, he was placed under arrest by Maryland officers and handcuffed.

While the officers were at Butler's home, they heard noises in the dilapidated house nearby, but paid no attention to them at the time. Butler's house was searched but no liquor was found there.

As the officers, with Beall in tow, left Butler's home, they saw an automobile nearby. Going to the machine, the officers found a rifle on the floor, and John Williams, Gettysburg negro, and son-in-law of Butler, at the wheel.

Long-Distance Fliers Forced Down In Boston

Boston, Feb. 23 (AP)—Nat C. Browne, former army pilot, and Edward Muldowney, who took off to-day from Old Orchard Beach, Maine, on a projected non-stop flight to Buenos Aires, landed their plane, "The Lone Star," at the Boston airport two hours later because of engine trouble.

The plane's landing gear was smashed in the landing but both men escaped injuries. The plane came close to turning over as it nosed into the earth when the left wheel collapsed. Browne said the plane was over Cape Cod when a cylinder burned out. The engine trouble caused the craft to lose altitude and it quickly dropped to within a few feet of the water.

"We had a close call," Browne said.

PARENT LEAVES BOY, 3, ON TRAIN

Conductor Finds Abandoned Tot As Train Arrives In Harrisburg.

Harrisburg, Feb. 23.—The conductor of a Cumberland Valley train which arrived at the Pennsylvania railroad station here at 2:26 o'clock Monday afternoon found an abandoned boy about three years old on the train shortly after it pulled out of Mechanicsburg.

"He turned the boy over to representative of the Travelers' Aid society at the station here and they are seeking to learn who are the parents of the child."

The boy only knows his name is "Harry," but does not know his last name. He says that the name of his father is "Harry," but told Travelers' Aid representatives who questioned him before he was taken to the Children's home at Paxtang that he did not wish to be returned to his father. His reason was: "Daddy don't like me."

The child got on the train with a group of persons at Mechanicsburg. A brakeman who helped him get on the train said:

Note In His Pocket "Where are you going, sonny?" "Harrisburg," the boy replied. The brakeman thought that the child was accompanied by someone in the group of persons who boarded the train. As no one was seen to leave the train, the boy is believed to have been directed to get on the train.

When the train left Mechanicsburg, the conductor noticed that the boy was alone. He asked him for his ticket, and the child handed him a note which said: "To the Well Fair People: "Please see that this little boy will be cared for or get him a good home. I did charity enough. His mother ran away with a married man and left her children, and no one to care for him. please get someone to take care of him. "Oblige thanks."

AMUSEMENTS

Majestic Willard Robertson, who created the role of Skippy's father in the first Percy Crosby story to be screened, carries on in the same part for "Sooky," Paramount's companion piece featuring Jackie Cooper and Robert Coogan. It will be shown at the Majestic theatre, Wednesday.

Robertson is one of Broadway's few actor-playwrights, and one of four performers who have appeared in two Pulitzer prize plays, "Winter Bound" and "Miss Lulu Bett."

Before coming to Hollywood for his roles in "Skippy," "Silence" and "Sooky," he appeared in his own play, "This Man's Town." He is author also of "Big Game," "The Sea Woman" and "Black Velvet," in which he had prominent parts.

His first stage appearance was in 1905 with Joseph Jefferson in "Rip Van Winkle." Subsequent stage roles were in George Ade's "The College Widow," and the original "Dave" in "Trail of the Lonesome Pine." He was a Broadway attraction along with William S. Hart, George Bancroft and Charlotte Walker for three years.

FLEET-WINGS LACE DEL-MAR

Capture Rubber-game To Decide Championship Of This Area 37 To 34.

The Fleet-Wings soared to new heights Monday night by handing the Del-Mar professionals of Hanover a 37-34 defeat on the local court and thereby winning the "rubber" game of their three-game series.

A large crowd witnessed the hard fought contest that provided many thrills. Plenty of rough playing was in evidence but this was eclipsed by some brilliant basketball exhibited by both teams.

Captain Lou Reilly put up one of the best games he has given since joining the Wings. Reilly landed nine points and was a strong defensive man. The lanky center injured his knee in the early minutes of the final quarter and his absence was sorely felt when the visitors started their last period rally.

All Play Well Each man who participated in the fracas for the Wings put up good games. Charley Gelbert rammed the cords for five goals in the first half but was well covered in the last half. Jack Albright, Lebanon Valley star of a few seasons back, made his debut as a Wing and gave an excellent exhibition. H. Bream, Raff, Buehler and G. Bream each contributed some fine playing.

The Del-Mars had a powerful lineup of stars. Jack Bonner, ex-Temple star, and Danny Witmer, Hanover high dribbler of yesterday, put up the best exhibitions for the visitors. Bonner looped twelve points and Witmer landed nine. Hoke, ex-Gettysburg college luminary, failed to set the pace he exhibited Saturday night, Hen Bream keeping him well covered.

Wings Take Lead "Yockey" Bream looped the first goal of the evening but the Del-Mars came right back and forged into the lead on a goal by Greenaway and two long leaves by Bonner. Charley Gelbert landed a shot and as the game waxed hotter, the Wings forged into a 9-7 lead at the quarter.

Gelbert set a fast pace in the second quarter that kept the locals out in front. The entire visiting team scored to keep right at the heels of the Wings, the half ending 19-16 with the gasmen leading.

Reilly, "Hen" Bream and Albright bewildered the visitors with some fast playing and deadly shooting. The Wings took a commanding 35-21 lead at the end of the third period.

Captain Reilly was forced out of the game in the first minute of play in the last period and the Del-Mar passers opened with a strong attack that nearly upset the locals. Witmer and Bonner plied the cords with goals but the Wings successfully froze the ball in the final minutes.

Arendstville once more proved its supremacy over the Littlestown Westover quintet, winning the preliminary game easily, 41-20. Tom Raff played rings around his opponent to hang up 19 points while Hufnagle landed 10 tallies for the locals. At half time Arendstville led 14-11.

Copyright 1932, By Associated Press Boston, Feb. 23. New light was shed upon the mysterious death in the Mediterranean of Elizabeth Barrett Cook, 20-year-old Boston society girl, Sunday by G. B. Beak, British consul general here. He expressed belief the girl had sent the now celebrated hoax messages to herself.

Mr. Beak said an examination of the two messages Miss Cook received at Naples, just prior to sailing for his country aboard the steamship Chinese Prince, showed them to have been Italian telegrams rather than cablegrams, as at first believed.

Believed Filled At Capri The messages told Miss Cook of the supposed death at Boston of her fiancé, St. George Arnold, 26, an electrical engineer whom she was soon to wed, and urged her not to return to this country. They were signed "Helen James."

Mr. Beak emphasized that his belief that she had written them herself was only his own conjecture and did not attempt to explain it.

Mr. Zimmerman also warned against encroachment on the legal profession by banking institutions by giving legal advice in trust matters, and by drawing up legal instruments. "While the practice is shunned in the larger cities, it is still followed to a great extent in the rural communities, he revealed. Equality of agriculture and industry in the tariff system was demanded in an address by Secretary of Agriculture John A. McSparan. If other types of business are to be accorded benefits and privileges by law, similar efforts should have been made to give protection to the farmer, he said.

The Chinese Prince, with five other passengers who had boarded it at Naples, reached Boston Saturday after a stormy trip. Immediately after making port, Captain Arnold, his counsel; Edmund L. Twomey, Miss Cook's uncle; Albert Carroll, and an attorney for Miss Cook's estate met at the British consulate, where Mr. Beak, acting informally, presided over a private meeting of all concerned.

Believe Strange Messages Sent by Boston Girl to Self

The messages were upon the usual Italian telegraph forms, typewritten, and apparently had been handed in at Capri, not far from Naples, Mr. Beak said. Both messages were delivered aboard the ship. One was received by the master, Capt. Howard Uncles, and the other presumably by the parser.

Text Not Made Public Both were read to Miss Cook over the telephone at her hotel in Naples a few hours before the ship sailed for Boston on February 4. She received them in person when she came aboard. Their text has not been made public.

Mr. Beak said the girl's death on the ship as it was nearing Gibraltar was, in his belief, due entirely to pneumonia. In the face of expressed medical opinion that the apparent symptoms of pneumonia can be caused by an overdose of certain kinds of tablets designed to alleviate headache and restlessness, Mr. Beak said he would await the report of the inquest now in progress at Gibraltar before reaching a definite opinion on that point.

Tablets Found in Stateroom A quantity of such tablets was reported to have been found among Miss Cook's effects in her stateroom. Her vital organs are being subjected to chemical analysis by British medical authorities at Gibraltar, where the inquest has been adjourned to await the result.

The Chinese Prince, with five other passengers who had boarded it at Naples, reached Boston Saturday after a stormy trip. Immediately after making port, Captain Arnold, his counsel; Edmund L. Twomey, Miss Cook's uncle; Albert Carroll, and an attorney for Miss Cook's estate met at the British consulate, where Mr. Beak, acting informally, presided over a private meeting of all concerned.

BOY CRAZY

by Grace Perkins

SYNOPSIS: Once a young social leader—now a business woman—young Hope Rosa tries to forget the unhappy ending of her marriage to Dickey Dale. Her father told her, when he had the marriage annulled, that Dickey did not attempt to see her. She does not know her father kept him from doing so.

Chapter 27

WEARING A RING

All that winter Hope toiled with a ceaseless energy. For only six weeks did she run away during the summer for a rest on the old ranch with Mrs. Manly; and then back again she tramped to relieve Judy and carry on the shop single-handed. The double work was more exciting and sweet than her own vacation.

For Judy went to Chicago on her time off, only to find, to her utter, humdrum amazement, that Tom was making good—not as a singer, a singer! A crooner they called him, as they handed him three hundred a week with an option at a pulker sum! Tom, who had never lifted his voice in Judy's presence, never even dreamed himself that he could sing, was billed in lights that big as a crooner! Judy went as she sat at a table to watch and listen to her Tom. Judy spattered tears on the telegram forms as she went daily, almost hourly, messages of joy to Hope. Judy choked with tears over the long-distance phone. And when Judy came home, telling nobody but Hope of her successful crooner, who looked so precious standing under the spotlight in the grandest tuxedo, she pitched into work with a new inspiring vigor. And why not, when for the first time in four years, she saw a hope of material success for herself and her erstwhile saxophone player?

Not one of the townfolk's prophecies came true. Hope did not tire and give it up as a whim. So little did she lose interest, that in the fall she announced the decision to open a shop on Madison avenue, New York. Delighted that she had found some serious interest, Papa Ross gladly offered to supply the money; and perhaps Hope never felt a keener thrill than when she refused it, and announced that she and Judy could run the business without extra help.

The shops were fun! They were successful, and success brings a vital and heady thrill. Hope was interested, she did enjoy the work, and she did relish the knowledge of her ability. She and Judy were making money. Judy was on the verge of throwing Frisky into the arms of the chorus girl he really wanted. And best of all, Hope would soon be twenty-one, and come into her grandmother's inheritance of five hundred a week until she was thirty-five, and then one half-million dollars outright. Life was gradually meaning something—Independence!

The fact that her New York shop and Dickey Dale's musical comedy opened on the same date that autumn, seemed like a good omen to her. Terribly she wanted to send a telegram of congratulation to Dickey! Terribly she wondered if he had heard of her business—or knew of her doings.

Quite calm and radiant, she attended Dickey's opening that night with Rusty Crandall by her side. Attended it and dusted out the last obscure corners of the theatre with her keenest glances for some sight of Dickey—or Hickey! Went home and cried herself to sleep because she hadn't seen either of them, because the show was so beautiful, and because it meant Dickey would have a brilliant start with his career. (Oh, please do write a play, Dickey, because they make so much money...)

But shortly after Christmas came the crash of all her hard-earned peace. Just one little item in a newspaper! Just a paragraph no bigger than Sassy's forehead—just a few black words—announcing the engagement of one Eileen Argyle to Richard J. Hickson Dale!

One clipping that was not torn out of the newspaper, slobbered with paste, and placed into a fine blue-leather scrapbook! One clipping that meant the end of all that had already been ended years ago...

No need of keeping the clipping, for every word was turned into her thoughts to haunt her waking or sleeping.

But Hope didn't cry. She didn't even feel like crying. She went down to her New York shop and sent out bloomers without dresses, eight-ounce bottles instead of booties, and confused the entire day's sales with calm and thoughtful inaccuracy.

All the long spring months she plodded through her work and her play. Conscious of only one ceaseless undifferentiated thought, Dickey was not only gone—but lost! Dickey loved someone else, and held her close, and kissed her. A good girl no doubt, who didn't get into scandals, who wasn't an outrageous flirt. And who was she? Did she have lots of money, or didn't Dickey care so much these days about inheritances?

If only she could let him know about her inheritance that was soon to come and set her free. She would have no pride about it.

But maybe with a hit show he didn't care about money now. Probably he didn't have to care so much. And did he ever tell Eileen about her? How did he explain it—that queer marriage—and what did he say in describing Hope?

Quiet, calm, subdued, Hope absorbed all that went on about her. Judy's happy engagement to the boy she truly loved; Tom Post come into his own at last—a hit on the radio as a crooner at seven hundred a week. And Frisky really relieved that he was through. Betty married in May. And Flora Riordan in June. . . . Everyone falling in love, getting engaged, planning for marriage. . . .

And so, merely because of the vacuum pain in her lonely heart, and because of the realization of one true and remaining devotion that should not lightly be discarded, Hope herself said "yes" one night in June. Yes, she promised Rusty Crandall, and felt like crying at the all-embracing fever of joy and stuttering plans of his faithful, dog-like devotion. Sat beside Rusty and watched his face light up as he talked so tenderly, remembering how she had watched him grow from knee pants into manhood, and wondering why she could not care for him any more than she did. Wondering why she couldn't feel stirred at the thoughts of a home for herself as he planned it—at the fact that someone was elaborately scheming for her happiness, even though he knew she didn't love him! Yes, he knew—she knew Dickey was still a husky ghost in her mind—but it didn't matter. He would win her love. . . .

Home, they told of their engagement to their parents and a few of their friends, but Hope insisted that they should not announce it publicly for a while. She preferred, she explained, to be married in the late fall and go to Venice for their honeymoon. With Christmas in Rome, and New Year's in Paris. Rusty bowed to her wishes as long as she would wear his ring—at least on a thin chain, with the ring under her gown. And wide-eyed in bed, she wondered why she didn't want to announce her engagement publicly when Rusty was the salt of the earth and a man one could safely trust one's lifetime to.

Why did she want a marriage in the autumn—with Venice, and Christmas in Rome—why? Was she waiting for her grandmother's inheritance that would come so soon now? No. What difference did the money make? Was she still unable to give up Dickey? Still unable to forget him, when obviously he had forgotten her—completely? Or did she just want time to get over the final hurt? That was it. The ache in her heart. The dull sense of futility. She needed time. . . .

How could Hope know as she stared out her window till the stars faded, and the sky became a dull, despairing gray, that hung heavy over the earth until the soft colors of early morning sifted through to cheer the world—how could she know that another girl, only two miles from her, on the other side of the track, was soaking her pillow with heavy tears, and tossing fitfully as she beat the mattress with crushed fists—all because she had heard of Rusty's engagement?

Rusty's father had told Angel in the office that afternoon, his eyes lighted, a complacent smile on his lips as he asked her not to tell anyone yet. How she had hated the Senior Crandall at that moment! Oh yes, she was his secretary now—the secretary to the boss of the whole works—secretary to God—for seventy-five a week. That's how she had made good in business. Unlucky in love. . . . If only she and her mother didn't need the money, and she could resign. Resign to go away, and let Rusty kiss Hope and waste his love on her. . . . No, Hope couldn't know that. She never thought of Angel any more—except to be sweet when they met, which was seldom. How could she know that her own heartache was agonizing another?

(Copyright, Grace Perkins)

Swift surprise, tomorrow, and Hope forms a startling plan. Secret preparations end—with Hope facing Dickey.

News From Neighboring Counties

FREDERICK COUNTY

FUTURE SCOUTING PLANS DISCUSSED

Frederick—The annual report of scouting activities in Frederick county during the past year under the direction of Scout Executive Henry R. Coates was heard at a meeting and luncheon of the executive committee of the Francis Scott Key district, Friday noon at the Francis Scott Key hotel, when plans for the future of scouting in this county were discussed. It was decided to invite representative citizens of the community to meet with the council on March 3 and consider the matter from a public standpoint to determine the exact nature and scope of future activities.

MODIFY PLAN FOR REORGANIZATION

Frederick—A meeting of the executive committee, in charge of the reorganization of the Central Trust company of Maryland, was held in the petit jury room at the court house Friday afternoon at which a modification of the original plan was placed before the committee. The modification has the approval of George W. Page, state bank commissioner, and receiver for the trust company, who will address a letter to the committee members shortly, giving his official approval to the modification.

PUBLIC SALE LIST LARGE

Frederick—An unusually large number of public sales has been listed on the sales register for February and March, there being more than 50 for the two months. Four sales were scheduled at the court house, but only two were held, the other two being cancelled.

YORK COUNTY

WILL TRANSFER PLANT TO YORK

York—The York Safe and Lock company is planning to bring to York that portion of the manufacture of its product, which is now being manufactured in the company's Baltimore plant. The Baltimore plant will be closed. This announcement was made late Saturday afternoon by S. Porry Laucks, president and general manager of the York Safe and Lock company, when he disclosed plans for extensive alterations, as well as a general rearranging and changing at the company's York plant, northeast of the city.

PIANO AND SONG BOOKS FOR JAIL

York—Presentation of 100 song books, "Songs of Service", also a Baby Grand piano, marked the religious services conducted in the York county jail Sunday afternoon under direction of William H. Rodewig, Jr. The song books, Mr. Rodewig announced, were the gift of County Commissioner William H. Snyder, and the piano was the gift of D. Harry Everhart.

POSSESSES OLD PRINT OF WASHINGTON

Hanover—What is considered the original print from the engraving by James Heath, historical engraver to His Majesty and His Royal Highness, the Prince of Wales, from the original picture of "General Washington", in the collection of the Marquis of Lansdown, which was painted by Gabriel Stuart in 1797, is in the possession of J. M. Koller, 223 West Chestnut street, Hanover. The engraving, with the original margin and inscription, is the only known print of the picture in existence.

FRANKLIN COUNTY

EXHIBIT MARKS WASHINGTON CELEBRATION

Chambersburg—The nation-wide observance of the George Washington bicentennial has found first formal expression here in an exhibit sponsored by the Franklin County Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution in the southernmost windows of the Nathan store, South Main street. The exhibit is of a wide variety of selected antiques, ranging through portraits, silhouettes, hooked rugs, pewterware, old flintlock rifles, pistols and old books and furniture. It will remain in the Nathan store through Wednesday.

COUNCIL CUTS BOROUGH TAX

Waynesboro—Waynesboro council, with economy as its purpose, reduced the 1932 mill rate to 12 at the monthly meeting Friday night. The rate last year was 13 mills. Ordinance No. 315, establishing the rate and budget of approximately $115,000, was unanimously approved. The budget calls for expenditures of $75,008.53 in the general borough account and approximately $40,000 in the water account. The ordinance will be advertised this week.

CHICKENPOX PREVALENT HEALTH OFFICER REPORTS

Waynesboro—Health Officer Percy Snowberger reported placarding twenty homes during the month of January and lifting a like number at council meeting Friday night. Fifteen of the placards posted were for chicken pox. Other quarantines placed were: measles, one; mumps, two, and scarlet fever, two.

WASHINGTON COUNTY

RETURNS HOME TO FIND HOUSE BURNED

Hagerstown—The home of Lewis L. Kreps, who figured in the automobile accident on the Western pike in which Mrs. Clarence Daywalt, this city, was killed, was burned to the ground late Saturday night or early Sunday morning. The blaze was not discovered by Kreps until Sunday evening when he left the hospital to return to his home, which is located back of Walnut Point and not far from Charlestown. When he arrived he found

Mother and Girl Suicides to End Burden on Relatives

Philadelphia, Feb. 23.—A mother and daughter ended their lives in each other's arms Sunday rather than "impose on the generosity" of the only member of the household who had retained a job.

They were Mrs. Anna M. Hibbs, 45, of 616 North 64th street, and Miss Elizabeth Hibbs, 20, a graduate dietitian and member of the casts of recent dramatic productions of St. Francis Junior aid.

Mrs. Hibbs' sister, Mrs. Hester C. Laufer, who is employed as a cashier by the Philadelphia Rapid Transit company, is the third member of the household.

The motive of the double suicide was revealed in two brief notes addressed to Mrs. Laufer, one by the mother and the other by the daughter, found on the kitchen table. Mrs. Hibbs wrote two additional messages, one containing her apologies to police for the "trouble" she was about to cause them and the second addressed to an undertaker.

When Mrs. Laufer left home at 10 o'clock Saturday night to report for work Mrs. Hibbs and her daughter appeared to be in a normal frame of mind, she told police. When she returned at 10 a. m. she detected the odor of gas before she had opened the front door. Afraid to enter, she telephoned police of the 61st and Thompson street stations.

Mother and daughter had gone to a bedroom on the second floor of their three-story home and dismantled a bed. They carried the sections to the kitchen on the first floor, reassembled the bed, locked the doors, opened jets of the gas range and lay down in each other's arms.

Hours later a neighbor smelled the escaping gas and notified the gas company. Employees were sent only the smoldering ruins. Loss, partially covered by insurance, was estimated in excess of $5,000.

CHICKENS BURNED IN MORNING FIRE

Hagerstown—Several hundred baby chickens perished when fire about 7 o'clock Sunday morning destroyed the hen house, corn crib and hog pen on the farm of James Dayhoff, Fiddlersburg. Neighbors gathered and by means of a bucket brigade saved the residence, not far from the fire.

The blaze is believed to have been started from a brooder. The loss is estimated at about $500.

EXPIRES WHILE DRIVING CAR

Hagerstown—John Getzendanner, 73, of the Baptist Church community just over the Pennsylvania line near Hancock, dropped dead from heart failure while driving his touring car Sunday morning on Pennsylvania avenue near the edge of Hancock. He slumped over in the seat and the car, unguided, continued on for some distance, running over a small culvert alongside the highway and then stopping in the yard of Fred Powers.

CUMBERLAND COUNTY

LARGE AUDIENCE GREETED KELLY

Mechanicsburg—George Washington, as a firm advocate of law enforcement, would certainly be strongly in favor of observance of the prohibition laws of today. Congressman M. Clyde Kelly told an audience of more than 1,000 persons who jammed the Mechanicsburg high school auditorium Sunday night for a community service to honor the "Father of His Country."

DR. PRINCE GIVES ANNIVERSARY LECTURE

Carlisle—State Senator Leon C. Prince, of Carlisle, spoke at the community observance of the 200th anniversary of George Washington's birthday conducted Sunday afternoon at the Carlisle barracks and auditorium. More than eight hundred attended the celebration, which was continued Monday in the auditorium of the Carlisle high school.

DISMISS INDICTMENTS

JAP PREMIER WINS ELECTION

War Policy Not Involved In Campaign: Prosperity Is Big Issue.

Tokio, Feb. 23 (AP).—The Seiyukai party of Premier Suoyoshi Inukai was leading in returns today from Japan's general election by such a margin that its leaders claimed the government had remained in power by an unprecedented victory.

The party of Japan's "Gray Fox," the 76-year-old Inukai, took over power last December with a minority in the house of representatives, which made the election test of its control inevitable. The returns up to midnight gave it a lead of thirty-six seats over the Minseitō, the principal opposition.

With 160 out of the Diet's 466 seats reported, the standing was: Seiyukai, 96; Minseitō, 60; others, 4. Thus the party in power at the time of the election apparently won again, as it unusually does in Japanese elections, and this time with a much-needed majority indicated. Whereas a small margin had been expected, the leaders of the government were so encouraged they predicted their total in the new house would be 300.

Nearly every district where the counting began soon after the polls closed Saturday reported heavy Seiyukai gains and Minseitō losses. The final outcome, however, will not be known until tonight at the earliest, two-thirds of the ballot boxes remaining unopened.

The election, without significance so far as foreign policy was concerned, was principally on economic issues. "A vote for the Seiyukai hastens the return of prosperity," was that party's slogan.

The Minseitō party, which lost control when the cabinet of Reijiro Wakatsuki fell last December, argued that "one cannot feed on a flutuous boom," referring to the Seiyukai's assertion that its inflationary policy would bring better times.

Kremlin Strips Emigres Of Citizenship And Prohibits Entry To Country.

Moscow, Feb. 23 (AP).—Leon Trotsky and thirty-six other Russian emigres Sunday were formally stripped of their Soviet citizenship and forbidden "for all time" to enter the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. The action was taken by the presidium of the central executive committee.

In the case of Trotsky the action was a mere formality, for he was banished permanently from the Soviet Union two years ago and sent to Istanbul, where he since has lived as a bitter exile.

Trotsky was banished after an open split with Josef Stalin, Russia's strong man. He became a leader of the Left Wing, who preached a doctrine of world revolution as a necessity before socialism could be built in one country. Since taking up his residence in Turkey, Trotsky has been a constant thorn in the side of the Soviet government by his biting criticisms, both written and spoken, of the policies pursued by the Kremlin.

As a result "Trotskyism" has become a byword here for the slightest manifestation of any opposition to Stalin. Numerous strayers from the straight line of the Communist party have been branded thus and punished as followers of the former war commissar in the days of Lenin. Only recently Stalin wrote an article castigating his old enemy for his "rotten liberalism."

Other former Soviet citizens who fell under Sunday's ban were identified as Mensheviks or their sympathizers. Few of them are well known. They include Raphael Abramovitch, long associated with Soviet activities outside of Russia, and Feodor Dan, whose name once was linked with a "plot charge" by the Soviets.

VITAMIN B IN BRAN. RESEARCH REVEALS

Also Has "Bulk" to Further Assist Elimination, and Iron for Blood

One of the functions of Vitamin B is to help tone the intestinal tract, and promote elimination. Now, laboratory experiments show Kellogg's ALL-BRAN contains this valuable vitamin.

In addition, ALL-BRAN brings a plentiful supply of "bulk"—which provides the "ballast" needed to exercise the intestines.

This "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is similar to that of lettuce. Inside the body, it is different from the way you see it in the package. It absorbs moisture, and forms a soft mass which gently clears the intestines of wastes. Special cooking processes make ALL-BRAN finer, milder, more palatable.

Another healthful element brought by ALL-BRAN is iron. Tests show this cereal has twice as much usable iron as the same weight of beef liver.

Check common constipation—with its frequent headaches, loss of appetite and energy—by eating this delicious cereal. How much pleasanter than taking pills and drugs—so often habit-forming.

Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily—sufficient to overcome most types of constipation. If your intestinal trouble is not relieved this way, see your doctor.

BOY CRAZY

by Grace Perkins

SYNOPSIS: Once a young social leader—now a business woman—young Hope Ross tries to forget the unhappy ending of her marriage to Dickey Dale. Her father told her, when he had the marriage annulled, that Dickey did not attempt to see her. She does not know her father kept him from doing so.

WEARING A RING

All that winter Hope toiled with a ceaseless energy. For only six weeks did she run away during the summer for a rest on the old ranch with Mrs. Manly; and then back again she tramped to relieve Judy and carry on the shop single-handed. The double work was more exciting and sweet than her own vacation.

For Judy went to Chicago on her time off, only to find, to her utter, humdrum amazement, that Tom was making good—not as a saxophone player but as a singer. A crooner they called him, as he handed him three hundred a week with an option at a bulkier sum! Tom, who had never lifted his voice in Judy's presence, never even dreamed himself that he could sing, was billed in lights that big as a crooner! Judy wept as she sat at a table to watch and listen to her Tom. Judy spattered tears on the telegram forms as she went daily, almost hourly, messages of joy to Hope. Judy choked with tears over the long-distance phone.

And when Judy came home telling nobody but Hope of her successful crooner, who looked so precious standing under the spotlight in the grandest tuxedo, she pitched into work with a new inspiring vigor. And why not, when for the first time in four years, she saw a hope of material success for herself and her erstwhile saxophone player?

Not one of the townfolk's prophecies came true. Hope did not tire and give it up as a whim. So little did she lose interest, that in the fall she announced the decision to open a shop on Madison avenue, New York. Delighted that she had found some serious interest, Papa Ross gladly offered to supply the money; and perhaps Hope never felt a keener thrill than when she refused it, and announced that she and Judy could run the business without extra help.

The shops were fun! They were successful, and success brings a vital and heady thrill. Hope was interested, she did enjoy the work, and she did relish the knowledge of her ability. She and Judy were making money. Judy was on the verge of throwing Frisky into the arms of the chorus girl he really wanted. And best of all, Hope would soon be twenty-one, and come into her grandmother's inheritance of five hundred a week until she was thirty-five, and then one half-million dollars outright. Life was gradually meaning something—Independence!

The fact that her New York shop and Dickey Dale's musical comedy opened on the same date that autumn, seemed like a good omen to her. Terribly she wanted to send a telegram of congratulation to Dickey! Terribly she wondered if he had heard of her business—or knew of her doings.

Quite calm and radiant, she attended Dickey's opening that night with Rusty Crandall by her side. Attended it and dusted out the last obscure corners of the theatre with her keenest glances for some sight of Dickey—or Hickey! Went home and cried herself to sleep because she hadn't seen either of them, because the show was so beautiful, and because it meant Dickey would have a brilliant start with his career. (Oh, please do write a play, Dickey, because they make so much money. . . .)

But shortly after Christmas came the crash of all her hard-earned poise. Just one little item in a newspaper! Just a paragraph no bigger than Sassy's forehead—just a few black words—announcing the engagement of one Eileen Argyle to Richard J. Hickson Dale!

One clipping that was not torn out of the newspaper, slobbered with paste, and placed into a fine blue-leather scrapbook! One clipping that meant the end of all that had already been ended years ago. . . .

No need of keeping the clipping, for every word was turned into her thoughts to haunt her waking or sleeping.

But Hope didn't cry. She didn't even feel like crying. She went down to her New York shop and sent out bloomers without dresses, eight-ounce bottles instead of booties, and confused the entire day's sales with calm and thoughtful inaccuracy.

All the long spring months she plodded through her work and her play. Conscious of only one ceaseless undercurrent of thought. Dickey was not only gone—but lost! Dickey loved someone else, and held her close, and kissed her. . . . A good girl no doubt, who didn't get into scandals, who wasn't an outrageous flirt. And who was she? Did she have lots of money, or didn't Dickey care so much these days about inheritances?

If only she could let him know about her inheritance that was soon to come and set her free. She would have no pride about it.

But maybe with a hit show he didn't care about money now. . . . Probably he didn't have to care so much. And did he ever tell Eileen about her? How did he explain it—that queer marriage—and what did he say in describing Hope?

Quiet, calm, subdued, Hope absorbed all that went on about her. Judy's happy engagement to the boy she truly loved; Tom Post come into his own at last—a hit on the radio as a crooner at seven hundred a week. And Frisky really relieved that he was through. Betty married in May. And Flora Riordan in June. . . . Everyone falling in love, getting engaged, planning for marriage. . . .

And so, merely because of the vacuum pain in her lonely heart, and because of the realization of one true and remaining devotion that should not lightly be discarded, Hope herself said "yes" one night in June. Yes, she promised Rusty Crandall, and felt like crying at the all-embracing fever of joy and stuttering plans of his faithful, dog-like devotion. Sat beside Rusty and watched his face light up as he talked so tenderly, remembering how she had watched him grow from knee pants into manhood, and wondering why she could not care for him any more than she did. Wondering why she couldn't feel stirred at the thoughts of a home for herself as he planned it—at the fact that someone was elaborately scheming for her happiness, even though he knew she didn't love him! Yes, he knew—she knew Dickey was still a husky ghost in her mind—but it didn't matter. He would win her love. . . .

Home, they told of their engagement to their parents and a few of their friends, but Hope insisted that they should not announce it publicly for a while. She preferred, she explained, to be married in the late fall and go to Venice for their honeymoon. With Christmas in Rome, and New Year's in Paris.

Rusty bowed to her wishes as long as she would wear his ring—at least on a thin chain, with the ring under her gown. And wide-eyed in bed, she wondered why she didn't want to announce her engagement publicly when Rusty was the salt of the earth and a man one could safely trust one's lifetime to. Why did she want a marriage in the autumn—with Venice, and Christmas in Rome—why? Was she waiting for her grandmother's inheritance that would come so soon now? No. What difference did the money make? Was she still unable to give up Dickey? Still unable to forget him, when obviously he had forgotten her—completely? Or did she just want time to get over the final hurt? That was it. The ache in her heart. The dull sense of futility. She needed time. . . .

How could Hope know as she stared out her window till the stars faded, and the sky became a dull, despairing gray, that hung heavy over the earth until the soft colors of early morning sifted through to cheer the world—how could she know that another girl, only two miles from her, on the other side of the track, was soaking her pillow with heavy tears, and tossing fitfully as she beat the mattress with crushed fists—all because she had heard of Rusty's engagement?

Rusty's father had told Angel in the office that afternoon, his eyes lighted, a complacent smile on his lips as he asked her not to tell anyone yet. How she had hated the Senior Crandall at that moment! Oh yes, she was his secretary now—the secretary to the boss of the whole works—secretary to God—for seventy-five a week. That's how she had made good in business. Unlucky in love. . . . If only she and her mother didn't need the money, and she could resign. Resign to go away, and let Rusty kiss Hope and waste his love on her. . . . No, Hope couldn't know that. She never thought of Angel any more—except to be sweet when they met, which was seldom. How could she know that her own heartache was agonizing another?

Swift surprise, tomorrow, and Hope forms a startling plan. Secret preparations end—with Hope facing Dickey.

News From Neighboring Counties

Frederick—The annual report of scouting activities in Frederick county during the past year under the direction of Scout Executive Henry R. Coates was heard at a meeting and luncheon of the executive committee of the Francis Scott Key district, Friday noon at the Francis Scott Key hotel, when plans for the future of scouting in this county were discussed. It was decided to invite representative citizens of the community to meet with the council on March 3 and consider the matter from a public standpoint to determine the exact nature and scope of future activities.

MODIFY PLAN FOR REORGANIZATION

Frederick—A meeting of the executive committee, in charge of the reorganization of the Central Trust company of Maryland, was held in the petit jury room at the court house Friday afternoon at which a modification of the original plan was placed before the committee. The modification has the approval of George W. Page, state bank commissioner, and receiver for the trust company, who will address a letter to the committee members shortly, giving his official approval to the modification.

PUBLIC SALE LIST LARGE

Frederick—An unusually large number of public sales has been listed on the sales register for February and March, there being more than 50 for the two months. Four sales were scheduled at the court house, but only two were held, the other two being cancelled.

WILL TRANSFER PLANT TO YORK

York—The York Safe and Lock company is planning to bring to York that portion of the manufacture of its product, which is now being manufactured in the company's Baltimore plant. The Baltimore plant will be closed. This announcement was made late Saturday afternoon by S. Porry Laucks, president and general manager of the York Safe and Lock company, when he disclosed plans for extensive alterations, as well as a general rearranging and changing at the company's York plant, northeast of the city.

PIANO AND SONG BOOKS FOR JAIL

York—Presentation of 100 song books, "Songs of Service," also a Baby Grand piano, marked the religious services conducted in the York county jail Sunday afternoon under direction of William H. Rodewig, Jr. The song books, Mr. Rodewig announced, were the gift of County Commissioner William H. Snyder, and the piano was the gift of D. Harry Everhart.

POSSESSES OLD PRINT OF WASHINGTON

Hanover—What is considered the original print from the engraving by James Heath, historical engraver to His Majesty and His Royal Highness, the Prince of Wales, from the original picture of "General Washington," in the collection of the Marquis of Lansdown, which was painted by Gabriel Stuart in 1797, is in the possession of J. M. Koller, 223 West Chestnut street, Hanover. The engraving, with the original margin and inscription, is the only known print of the picture in existence.

EXHIBIT MARKS WASHINGTON CELEBRATION

Chambersburg—The nation-wide observance of the George Washington bicentennial has found first formal expression here in an exhibit sponsored by the Franklin County Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution in the southernmost windows of the Nathan store, South Main street.

The exhibit is of a wide variety of selected antiques, ranging through portraits, silhouettes, hooked rugs, pewterware, old flintlock rifles, pistols and old books and furniture. It will remain in the Nathan windows through Wednesday.

COUNCIL CUTS BOROUGH TAX

Waynesboro—Waynesboro council, with economy as its purpose, reduced the 1932 mill rate to 12 at the monthly meeting Friday night. The rate last year was 13 mills. Ordinance No. 315, establishing the rate and budget of approximately $115,000, was unanimously approved.

The budget calls for expenditures of $75,008.53 in the general borough account and approximately $40,000 in the water account. The ordinance will be advertised this week.

CHICKENPOX PREVALENT HEALTH OFFICER REPORTS

Waynesboro—Health Officer Percy Snowberger reported placarding twenty homes during the month of January and lifting a like number at council meeting Friday night.

Fifteen of the placards posted were for chicken pox. Other quarantines placed were: measles, one; mumps, two, and scarlet fever, two.

RETURNS HOME TO FIND HOUSE BURNED

Hagerstown—The home of Lewis L. Kreps, who figured in the automobile accident on the Western pike in which Mrs. Clarence Daywalt, this city, was killed, was burned to the ground late Saturday night or early Sunday morning.

The blaze was not discovered by Kreps until Sunday evening when he left the hospital to return to his home, which is located back of Walnut Point and not far from Charlton. When he arrived he found

Mother and Girl Suicides to End Burden on Relatives

Philadelphia, Feb. 23.—A mother and daughter ended their lives in each other's arms Sunday rather than "impose on the generosity" of the only member of the household who had retained a job.

They were Mrs. Anna M. Hibbs, 45, of 616 North 64th street, and Miss Elizabeth Hibbs, 20, a graduate dietitian and member of the casts of recent dramatic productions of St. Francis' Junior aid.

Mrs. Hibbs' sister, Mrs. Hester C. Laufer, who is employed as a cashier by the Philadelphia Rapid Transit company, is the third member of the household.

Notes Reveal Motive

The motive of the double suicide was revealed in two brief notes addressed to Mrs. Laufer, one by the mother and the other by the daughter, found on the kitchen table. Mrs. Hibbs wrote two additional messages, one containing her apologies to police for the "trouble" she was about to cause them and the second addressed to an undertaker.

When Mrs. Laufer left home at 10 o'clock Saturday night to report for work Mrs. Hibbs and her daughter appeared to be in a normal frame of mind, she told police. When she returned at 10 a. m. she detected the odor of gas before she had opened the front door. Afraid to enter, she telephoned police of the 61st and Thompson street stations.

Mother and daughter had gone to a bedroom on the second floor of their three-story home and dismantled a bed. They carried the sections to the kitchen on the first floor, reassembled the bed, locked the doors, opened jets of the gas range and lay down in each other's arms.

Hours later a neighbor smelled the escaping gas and notified the gas company. Employees were sent only the smoldering ruins. Loss, partially covered by insurance, was estimated in excess of $5,000.

CHICKENS BURNED IN MORNING FIRE

Hagerstown—Several hundred baby chickens perished when fire about 7 o'clock Sunday morning destroyed the hen house, corn crib and hog pen on the farm of James Dayhoff, Fiddlersburg. Neighbors gathered and by means of a bucket brigade saved the residence, not far from the fire.

The blaze is believed to have been started from a brooder. The loss is estimated at $500.

EXPIRES WHILE DRIVING CAR

Hagerstown—John Getzendanner, 73, of the Baptist Church community just over the Pennsylvania line near Hancock, dropped dead from heart failure while driving his touring car Sunday morning on Pennsylvania avenue near the edge of Hancock. He slumped over in the seat and the car, unguided, continued on for some distance, running over a small culvert alongside the highway and then stopping in the yard of Fred Powers.

Mechanicsburg—George Washington, as a firm advocate of law enforcement, would certainly be strongly in favor of observance of the prohibition laws of today, Congressman M. Clyde Kelly told an audience of more than 1,000 persons who jammed the Mechanicsburg high school auditorium Sunday night for a community service to honor the "Father of His Country."

DR. PRINCE GIVES ANNIVERSARY LECTURE

Carlisle—State Senator Leon C. Prince, of Carlisle, spoke at the community observance of the 200th anniversary of George Washington's birthday conducted Sunday afternoon at the Carlisle barracks and auditorium. More than eight hundred attended the celebration, which was continued Monday in the auditorium of the Carlisle high school.

Ritchie Predicts Democratic Victory

Detroit, Feb. 23 (AP).—Governor Ritchie, of Maryland, told a mass-meeting of democrats here Monday night "the democratic hosts are on the march" and "their goal is victory they cannot, they will not, be denied."

Accusing the republican party of a lack of vision, understanding and alert leadership and asserting its economic policies "largely contributed to the overwhelming catastrophe suffered by the business men and farmers of America," Maryland's candidate for the democratic nomination for president declared that "all over the United States the people are turning to the democratic party as their authentic voice. Our party is the party of the future."

Governor Ritchie said President Hoover and his supporters in the campaign of 1928 failed to repudiate "the conditions brought about by members of their party who had been false to their oaths of office. They became beneficiaries of the cash contributions to the treasury of the republican party made by those who had been conspiring with public officials to loot the public assets."

HITLER SEEKS PRESIDENCY

German Fascists' Leader Selected To Oppose President Von Hindenburg.

Berlin, Feb. 23 (AP).—Adolf Hitler, leader of Germany's Nazis, will be the presidential candidate of his National Socialist party in the coming election, a party meeting was told Monday night by his lieutenant, Joseph Goebbels.

His aide's announcement, made to a gathering of the fiery Fascist's followers in the Sports Palace, set the political party alignments for the campaign in clean-cut array.

Three Oppose Von Hindenburg. President Paul von Hindenburg, as a result, is faced with three opposition candidates in his campaign for re-election. But the failure of the Rightists to agree on a joint candidate may prove their undoing. The certain runners in the race against the veteran of the war who is the incumbent are Hitler, Ernst Thaelmann, Communist nominee, and Theodore Duestenberg, the Nationalist candidate who is vice president of the Steel Helms, an organization of war veterans.

Before Duestenberg and Hitler were brought out as candidates, the Nationalists and the Nazis, whose interests heretofore have been closely linked, held long conferences looking toward a joint candidate to put in the running against President von Hindenburg. At the end of the conferences it was apparent the Nazis had decided to put up a simon-pure Hitlerite.

Herr Goebbels' announcement that Hitler himself would be the nominee was greeted with a storm of cheers and thunderous shouts of "Hail" that lasted for many minutes. Hitler was not at the meeting.

Roosevelt Group Hint State Plot

Harrisburg, Feb. 23. — Charges were made here Monday at a meeting of the recently organized Roosevelt-for-President league of Pennsylvania, that John R. Collins, democratic state chairman, is furthering the delegate fight here for former Governor Smith for the sole purpose of blocking Governor Roosevelt's chances and thus "obtaining control of the Pennsylvania delegation for trading purposes" at the Chicago convention.

James F. Lavery, county chairman of Erie, in a telegram to Warren Vandye, president of the league, said that Collins told him January 29 that he and Sedgwick Kistler, national committeeman, had gone to New York to get Smith's consent for the use of his name in the Pennsylvania primary and that Smith had refused to give it.

"But they are going to run Smith anyway without his consent," Lavery asserted. "Collins further told us Smith could not possibly be nominated at Chicago, but they were going to use him in Pennsylvania to stop Roosevelt."

Countians Home From Long Tour

Calvin Hoffman, of Quaker Valley, returned recently from a trip to Florida and other southern points which he took as a member of the Pennsylvania Farmers' tour.

The party, comprising sixty-four men and women, left January 29 from Harrisburg by rail to Florida. From there it went by water to Cuba, Panama, through the Panama canal to Honduras and back to Florida, having spent nine and a half days on water. The members of the party returned home last week.

Three other residents of Adams county, Dr. and Mrs. Albert Woerner, of Cashtown, and Mrs. Eliza Myers, of York Springs, were included in the party.

LICENSE IS SUSPENDED

Melvin Harmon, Gettysburg R. 5, had his driver's license suspended by the bureau of motor vehicles.

LEAGUE GAME ON WEDNESDAY

Bullets Meet Scrappy Albright Passers in Local Gymnasium Tomorrow.

Doggedly pursuing the leaders in the Eastern Pennsylvania collegiate basketball league from the third place post the revamped and scrappy Albright quintet, of Reading, face the battle-scarred Bullet dribblers of Gettysburg college, in the Eddie Plank gymnasium, Wednesday night.

Albright is in third place after a stubborn uphill scrap in the college cage loop. They are reported to be in fine fettle for the G-burg battle here tomorrow night and are confident of jolting the Bream-coached aggregation who in all probability will again be without the services of their star, Captain Haber Seely.

Seely was discharged from the Annie Warner hospital on Sunday but was sent direct to the college infirmary where he is still under the care of the team physician. It is not known definitely whether he will be permitted to play in Wednesday's tilt. If not he will be replaced by Johnny Howard, who will jump center. Buohi will be shifted from the tap-off post to forward with Dracha and Olkewicz and Jones will do the heavy defense work.

Franklin and Marshall's victory over Ursinus, Saturday night, gave them a game and one-half margin over the Bullets. The Leancrants have played one more league game than the Bullets. This margin will not be equaled until March 1 when the Bullets, engage Lebanon Valley and the Possums will be idle.

The preliminary tilt will find the York Collegiate institute battling the Bullet freshmen.

Butler Farmers To Meet Friday

For the purpose of discussing with farmers of Butler township the testing of cattle for bovine tuberculosis eradication, a public meeting has been called for Friday evening, at 7:45 o'clock at Good Hope school, M. T. Hartman, Adams county farm agent, announced today. Invitations to attend have gone out to 139 farmers in Butler township, but all who have not received an invitation are urged to attend.

No effort will be made at the meeting to sign up the farmers for the tuberculosis tests, the idea being simply to outline similar work being done elsewhere in the county.

Sixty-day re-tests of reactors in herds in Latmore and Menallen townships, were initial tuberculosis tests have been given, are being made this week.

One Still, a Rifle and a Pair Of Handcuffs.. Zip!...Escape

Somewhere in the fastnesses of the hills surrounding Emmitsburg is a man supposedly wearing handcuffs who escaped from officers following his arrest on a charge of operating a still.

The story of the arrest of Nelson Beall, alleged operator of a still and his subsequent escape, is interwoven with supposed efforts of rival bootleggers to wreck the still which Beall is alleged to have owned.

The still was located in a dilapidated house near the farm of John Butler, a negro, one mile north of Emmitsburg, on the Gettysburg road. Late one night recently, Butler was aroused by what he believed was noise being made by men attempting to wreck Beall's still. Beall, who was sleeping at the negro's house that night, was slow to wake up, and when he finally roused himself, he was placed under arrest by Maryland officers and handcuffed.

While the officers were at Butler's home, they heard noises in the dilapidated house nearby, but paid no attention to them at the time. Butler's house was searched but no liquor was found there.

As the officers, with Beall in tow, left Butler's home, they saw an au-

Long-Distance Fliers Forced Down In Boston

Boston, Feb. 23 (AP).—Nat C. Browne, former army pilot, and Edward Muldowney, who took off today from Old Orchard Beach, Maine, on a projected non-stop flight to Buenos Aires, landed their plane, "The Lone Star," at the Boston airport two hours later because of engine trouble.

The plane's landing gear was smashed in the landing but both men escaped injuries. The plane came close to turning over as it nosed into the earth when the left wheel collapsed. Browne said the plane was over Cape Cod when a cylinder burned out. The engine trouble caused the craft to lose altitude and it quickly dropped to within a few feet of the water.

"We had a close call," Browne said.

PARENT LEAVES BOY, 3, ON TRAIN

Conductor Finds Abandoned Tot As Train Arrives In Harrisburg.

Harrisburg, Feb. 23.—The conductor of a Cumberland Valley train which arrived at the Pennsylvania railroad station here at 2:26 o'clock Monday afternoon found an abandoned boy about three years old on the train shortly after it pulled out of Mechanicsburg.

"He turned the boy over to representative of the Travelers' Aid society at the station here and they are seeking to learn who are the parents of the child."

The boy only knows his name is "Harry," but does not know his last name. He says that the name of his father is "Harry," but told Travelers' Aid representatives who questioned him before he was taken to the Children's home at Paxtang that he did not wish to be returned to his father. His reason was: "Daddy don't like me."

The child got on the train with a group of persons at Mechanicsburg. A brakeman who helped him get on the train said:

Note In His Pocket

"Where are you going, sonny?" "Harrisburg," the boy replied. The brakeman thought that the child was accompanied by someone in the group of persons who boarded the train. As no one was seen to leave the train, the boy is believed to have been directed to get on the train.

When the train left Mechanicsburg, the conductor noticed that the boy was alone. He asked him for his ticket, and the child handed him a note which said: "To the Well Fair People: 'Please see that this little boy will be cared for or get him a good home. I did charity enough. His mother ran away with a married man, and left her children, and no one to care for him. please get someone to take care of him. 'Oblige thanks.'"

FLEET-WINGS LACE DEL-MAR

Capture Rubber-game To Decide Championship Of This Area 37 To 34.

The Fleet-Wings soared to new heights Monday night by handing the Del-Mar professionals of Hanover a 37-34 defeat on the local court and thereby winning the "rubber" game of their three-game series.

A large crowd witnessed the hard fought contest that provided many thrills. Plenty of rough playing was in evidence but this was eclipsed by some brilliant basketball exhibited by both teams.

Captain Lou Reilly put up one of the best games he has given since joining the Wings. Reilly landed nine points and was a strong defensive man. The lanky center injured his knee in the early minutes of the final quarter and his absence was sorely felt when the visitors started their last period rally.

All Play Well

Each man who participated in the fracas for the Wings put up good games. Charley Gilbert rammed the cords for five goals in the first half but was well covered in the last half. Jack Albright, Lebanon Valley star of a few seasons back, made his debut as a Wing and gave an excellent exhibition. H. Bream, Raff, Buehler and G. Bream each contributed some fine playing.

The Del-Mars had a powerful lineup of stars. Jack Bonner, ex-Temple star, and Danny Witmer, Hanover high dribbler of yesterday, put up the best exhibitions for the visitors. Bonner looped twelve points and Witmer landed nine. Hoke, ex-Gettysburg college luminary, failed to set the pace he exhibited Saturday night, Hen Bream keeping him well covered.

Wings Take Lead

"Yockey" Bream looped the first goal of the evening but the Del-Mars came right back and forged into the lead on a goal by Greenaway and two long heaves by Bonner. Charley Gilbert landed a shot and, as the game, waxed hotter, the Wings forged into a 9-7 lead at the quarter.

Gilbert set a fast pace in the second quarter that kept the locals out in front. The entire visiting team scored to keep right at the heels of the Wings, the half ending 19-16 with the gasmen leading.

Reilly, "Hen" Bream and Albright bewildered the visitors with some fast playing, and, deadily, shooting. The Wings took a commanding 35-21 lead at the end of the third period.

Captain Reilly was forced out of the game in the first minute of play in the last period and the Del-Mar passers opened with a strong attack that nearly upset the locals. Witmer and Bonner played the cords with goals but the Wings successfully froze the ball in the final minutes.

Arendtsville once more proved its supremacy over the Littlestown Westover quintet, winning the preliminary game easily, 41-20. Tom Raff played rings around his opponent to hang up 19 points while Hufnagle landed 10 tallies for the losers. At half time Arendtsville led 14-11.

AMUSEMENTS

Majestic

Willard Robertson, who created the role of Skippy's father in the first Percy Crosby story to be screened, carries on in the same part for "Sooky," Paramount's companion piece featuring Jackie Cooper and Robert Coogan. It will be shown at the Majestic theatre, Wednesday.

Robertson is one of Broadway's few actor-playwrights, and one of four performers who have appeared in two Pulitzer prize plays, "Winter Bound" and "Miss Lulu Bett."

Before coming to Hollywood for his roles in "Skippy," "Silence" and "Sooky," he appeared in his own play, "This Man's Town." He is author also of "Big Game," "The Sea Woman" and "Black Velvet," in which he had prominent parts.

His first stage appearance was in 1905 with Joseph Jefferson in "Rip Van Winkle." Subsequent stage roles were in George Ade's "The Colleague Widow," and the original "Dave" in "Trail of the Lonesome Pine." He was a Broadway attraction along with William S. Hart, George Bancroft and Charlotte Walker for three years.

Believe Strange Messages Sent by Boston Girl to Self

Copyright 1932, By Associated Press

Boston, Feb. 23 New light was shed upon the mysterious death in the Mediterranean of Elizabeth Barrett Cook, 20-year-old Boston society girl, Sunday by G. B. Beak, British consul general here. He expressed belief the girl had sent the now celebrated hoax messages to herself.

Mr. Beak said an examination of the two messages Miss Cook received at Naples, just prior to sailing for his country aboard the steamship Chinese Prince, showed them to have been Italian telegrams rather than cablegrams, as at first believed.

Believed Fictitious

The messages told Miss Cook of the supposed death at Boston of her fiancé, St. George Arnold, 26, an electrical engineer whom she was soon to wed, and urged her not to return to this country. They were signed "Helen James."

Mr. Beak emphasized that his belief that she had written them herself was only his own conjecture and did not attempt to explain it.

association, and O. Howard Wolfe, vice president.

Mr. Zimmermann also warned against encroachment on the legal profession by banking institutions by giving legal advice in trust matters and by drawing up legal instruments. "While the practice is shunned in the larger cities, it is still followed to a great extent in the rural communities, he revealed. Equality of agriculture and industry in the tariff system was demanded in an address by Secretary of Agriculture John A. McSparan. If other types of business are to be accorded benefits and privileges by law, similar efforts should have been made to give protection to the farmer, he said.

Text Not Made Public

Both were read to Miss Cook over the telephone at her hotel in Naples a few hours before the ship sailed for Boston on February 4. She received them in person when she came aboard. Their text has not been made public.

Mr. Beak said the girl's death on the ship as it was nearing Gibraltar was, in his belief, due entirely to pneumonia. In the face of expressed medical opinion that the apparent symptoms of pneumonia can be caused by an overdose of certain kinds of tablets designed to alleviate headache and restlessness, Mr. Beak said he would await the report of the inquest now in progress at Gibraltar before reaching a definite opinion on that point.

Tablets Found in Stateroom

A quantity of such tablets was reported to have been found among Miss Cook's effects in her stateroom. Her vital organs are being subjected to chemical analysis by British medical authorities at Gibraltar, where the inquest has been adjourned to await the result.

The Chinese Prince, with five other passengers who had boarded it at Naples, reached Boston Saturday after a stormy trip. Immediately after making port, Captain Uncles, accompanied by representatives of the steamship line; Mr. Arnold, his counsel; Edmund L. Twomey, Miss Cook's uncle; Albert Carroll, and an attorney for Miss Cook's estate met at the British consulate, where Mr. Beak, acting informally, presided over a private meeting of all concerned.

FIFTY YEARS AGO

Local Items: William A. Scott, Esq., son of the late Major John Scott, has been appointed Mail Agent between Gettysburg and Emory Grove.

While jumping from a farm wagon on Wm. Gallagher, of Straban township, struck his knee on the rubber block of the wagon and dislocated the knee cap, the bone also being fractured.

Borough Committees: The following Executive Committees were appointed at the recent primary meetings:

1st Ward—J. A. Kitzmiller, E. G. Fahnestock, S. Mc. Swope.
2nd Ward—D. McConaughy, H. D. Scott, C. Horner.

3d Ward—Wm. Chritzman, D. Kitzmiller, T. T. Tate.

Marriages: Keagy—Bare—Feb. 7th, by the Rev. Dr. Hauer, Joseph G. Keagy, of Adams county, to Miss Louisa A. Bare, of York county.

Lohr—Heller—Feb. 9, by the Rev. A. J. Heller, Mr. Aaron H. Lohr, of Seven Stars, to Miss Anna M. Hake, of McKnightstown.

Yengst—Wierman—Jan. 15, at the Reformed Parsonage, Arentsville, by the Rev. A. J. Heller, Mr. Charles Yengst, to Miss Sally Wierman, both of Bendersville.

Charles Howard, Mountpleasant township, lost two children on Friday last by diphtheria. Both were buried on Sunday. We understand that two other children are down with the same disease.

Re-Union.—The annual re-union of the Sunday Schools and congregation of Christ church in this place came off on Thursday night. Notwithstanding the rain there was a general turn out of the congregation. Between two and three hundred persons partook of the bountiful supper provided by the ladies of the congregation. The entire basement, including portions of the section's apartment, was utilized. The infant school was out in full force, and had the precedence in being served with supper, each of the scholars being also presented with an orange and box of candies. The college glee club added much to the enjoyment of the evening. The supper was, as usual, under the management of the female teachers of the school, aided by efficient hired help. The re-union was informal and social and seemed to be enjoyed by all, many being reluctant to leave with the hour for closing (11 o'clock) came. For the first time professional waiters were employed to wait on the tables, who so satisfactorily did their work, as to make it probable that their services will be utilized at future reunions.

The Water Supply: The managers of the Gettysburg Water company have had a number of meetings to consider the most feasible way of securing an adequate water supply. The general drift of thought is to have one or more wells on Cemetery Hill, but there are conditions to be considered and difficulties to be encountered that demand careful consideration. Instead of going to work in a haphazard way, there has been a good deal of correspondence with parties presumed to be familiar with the scientific and practical surroundings. Among others, James MacFarlane, Esq., of Towanda, was written to. Mr. MacFarlane, besides being a native of Gettysburg and personally familiar with the ground, is an acknowledged authority on geological topics. His reply, aside from its bearing on the question of a water supply, is of general interest, by reason of its discussion of the geological formation of Seminary and Cemetery ridges.

On Monday last, Dr. T. T. Tate, assisted by Dr. Charles Horner, removed a fatty tumor, weighing 8½ ounces, from the shoulder of John Hartman, Jr., of Franklin township. It was successful and Mr. H. is doing well.

The Board of Directors of the "Mummasburg Mutual Fire Protection Society" have elected the following officers for the current year: President, E. W. Stahle; Vice President, George Thomas; Secretary, David McGraw; Treasurer, John P. Hartman; Executive Committee, Peter Scholl, Martin Thomas and John Hartman. (Mt. Joy.)

Fairfield Items: Capt. E. McGinley is away on a visit to Washington city.

Andrew Stoner, son of Peter Stoner, near this place, who had been working in Waynesboro, returned from work on Saturday evening week, took sick and died the next Wednesday morning.

Copper mining is still being carried on on the Russell property on the South mountain, with very flattering prospects.

Thaddeus Stultz captured a red fox alive last week and sold it for $3.

The Rev. McCarroll, of Shippensburg, and the Rev. Vance, of Carlisle, spent several days in our midst, holding services in Marsh Creek church and at Fairfield, and while here were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Rogers.

Jacob Shindelecker, near Maria Furnace, caught a wild-cat last week. He discovered it after some small pigs near his house.

Mr. Wm. Reindollar, of Taneytown, Md., and Mr. Samuel Musselman, and daughter, of Greencastle, have been visiting friends here.

Howard A. Musselman sold a chicken that weighed 11½ pounds.

New Office.—The Postmaster General has ordered the establishment of a new post office on the Harrisburg road between Gettysburg and Plainville, to be called "Unity". Mervin Rebert has been appointed post-master.

Deaths.—Bittinger—Feb. 7, in Hilltown, Franklin township, Mr. John Bittinger, aged 72 years, 9 months and some days.

SUNDOWN STORIES

THE LION
By Mary Graham Bonner

"I never realized how endless adventures could be," the pilot commented, "when we started having ours."

"We could have stayed with the camels for ever so long and have continued finding out more about their ways and all their family history, for they have lived in this part of the world so many, many years."

"We could have seen them helping, too, in the work of irrigating the land so vegetables and farm products could grow. They pull up jars and buckets of water from the wells."

"But—here we are! We're going to see the animal John is most anxious to see."

Suddenly the scene had changed and the children found themselves in an open patch beyond a thick and terrifying looking jungle. "Don't mention the gazelles here," the pilot whispered. "It would make our friend, whom we are soon to see, much too excited. He likes a gazelle for dinner as much as you like cream chicken."

But a pilot did not say another

HISTORY OF ADAMS COUNTY

A Chronological Review Of Things That Have Gone Before, And The Trials And Tribulations Of Our Ancestors, As Published Serially For The Benefit Of Gettysburg Times' Readers.

HAMILTONBAN CHURCHES

The Evangelical Lutheran church was organized November 10, 1855. Following are the names of the original members: John Nummemaker, Barnabas Riely, Maj. John Musselman, Christian Musselman, Jacob Musselman, Julia Ann Hoke, Michael Rugler, George Hull, Sr., Zephaniah Herbert. The names of the pastors: The Rev. H. Bishop, 1855; W. V. Gotwald, 1863; E. S. Johnston, 1866-86. The house of worship was erected in 1854 at a cost of about $2,500. The membership numbers 200. D. R. Musselman is secretary.

The New Reformed Church of Fairfield was dedicated December 29, 1878. This is modern Gothic, with audience room 55x35 feet and tower 95 feet in height, standing on the site of the old Union Reformed and Presbyterian church erected in 1824, and which was blown down the same year. The second church was built in 1825 and continued in use until 1878. The Presbyterians may hold services in this church until 1888, in consideration of their claims against the old Union building and grounds.

The Methodist Episcopal society was organized about 1827 and worshipped in private houses until 1830, when the first church was erected. On June 9, 1876, the Centennial Methodist Episcopal church was begun and completed, and dedicated November 30, that year. Up to this period the mission belonged to the Gettysburg Circuit; but since 1876, it has been in the Littlestown charge. The old cemetery in the rear has been removed.

The Catholics of "Carroll's Delight" were accustomed to visit Emmitsburg or Conowago in very early days; later, missionaries visited their homes, and in 1851 their present church was built. The congregation has not yet a resident pastor, and the church is a mission of the parish of Gettysburg. Here the old Catholic cemetery is still well kept. The Toppers, Dicks, Sanders, Lawlers, and many of the first settlers of "Carroll's Delight" belong to this old mission.

The public school house has been an institution here since 1835. Up to 1872 the building was of a very primitive character, but in that year a pretentious tili brick house was erected. The Sunday schools of the village are well conducted, and are large organizations.

Miscellaneous

There are a few business houses carrying heavy stocks of goods, a first-class hotel, the "Snively House" and a number of pleasant homes.

The ceremony of raising the Union flag at Fairfield took place April 22, 1861, and the first responses to the call for troops, many then from Hamiltonban township, came in the persons of Dr. A. O. Scott, Van Buren Tawney, David Reese, John W. Miller, Joseph word, for there, from out of the jungle came a lion—the most magnificent, beautiful lion John had ever seen.

The lion's mane hung over his shoulders and as he moved, his body swayed with the grace and ease that seemed to blend with the soft breeze that was blowing and to be a part of the whole scene.

Then the lion stopped and turned his shining, gleaming, yellow eyes on the children.

They stayed very still, although they were not in the least frightened.

"Simba," said the pilot softly, and the lion knew that name, for it was what natives around called him, but he knew that here were his friends.

PETROLELL HOPES DEMPSEY AVOIDS LEADING HEAVIES

Kansas City (AP)—Billy Petrolle, the Fargo Express, thinks so much of Jack Dempsey he hopes the former heavyweight champion doesn't tackle either Jack Sharkey or Max Schmeling in his ring come-back. "I believe they could take him," Petrolle told friends here. Petrolle has watched Dempsey in several of the latter's recent exhibitions.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE BLESSEDNESS OF BEING ALONE

I AM no exception to the rule. I get lonely. I want to be loved by people who understand a little of me. I want to be praised when I am worthy of praise. I want that wonderful companionship so vibrant in intimate understanding. I want to be humorously flattered, even, occasionally.

But—there are times when it is both blessed and necessary to be alone—to be gloriously alone. To exult and cry out with the pure joy of being alone. Alone to think, to plan, to examine, to create, to get acquainted with one's self. To be alone to dream and work. To be alone to grow!

The institution of marriage will "come of age," will become a beautiful reality of rare charm, when husband and wife learn the art of knowing when to be alone—separate and happy away from each other. When we are absent from the one we love most, we habitually think of the lovely qualities he or she bears. And in that state of mind we develop those lasting qualities which the more deeply endears the absent one to us.

I have known many a married pair whose home life was a turmoil and chaotic nightmare, largely because of the fact that each knew the other too well, though in their hearts loving each other deeply and with the sincerest regard. And I have seen pairs separated by death in which the remaining one grieved out the remaining years in the saddest sort of a wail!

The pity of it—when all could have been prevented by periodic separations.

We own life, but not the soul of the one we love. Nor do we own the personality, the creative urge of that one. That is something infinitely sacred and intimate. If such a man and woman do not trust each other, they have no right in the married state.

Our best and truest friends are those whom we see only occasionally. That character is greatest whose aloneness is allowed to flower and to bear ripe fruit.

Oh, the blessedness of maturity and immortal beauty that is born in aloneness!

Paul Painleve, former premier and noted mathematician, accepted an invitation from President Doumer to form a new cabinet to succeed that of Premier Laval, which resigned.

Willie and Bobby did at Worcester. Did you ever hear, by the way, what Willie remarked about the heat, as they started off the first tee in the afternoon round, right in the hottest part of a record-breaking day?

Bobby said: "The paper says it's 105 in the shade."

Willie said: "Yes—it's lucky we don't have to play in the shade!"

HEROIC MINER DIES ON SUNDAY

Death Recalls Sensational Rescue Of Four Men Entombed 21 Days.

Hazleton, Feb. 23.—The death of David MacFarlane, 79, at his home here after a long illness Sunday, revived the story of the heroic rescues who on February 25, 1891, brought out four miners entombed for twenty-one days in the Jeaneville mines, the record imprisonment before or since of mine workers in the hard-coal fields.

MacFarlane was the last survivor of the rescuing party.

Thirteen miners were drowned outright in the Jeaneville disaster, but MacFarlane and his men saved four other men who had been entombed.

MacFarlane was general superintendent when a miner named Charles Boyle blasted a hole accidentally from his chamber in Jeaneville No. 1 mine into the flooded workings of Jeaneville No. 2, long abandoned and whose proximity to the No. 1 workings was not suspected, due to No. 3 having been worked long before mine maps were in existence.

A flood of water dashed into the No. 1 workings, drowned thirteen men and entombed four others, while sixty, among them Boyle, escaped. Pumping the water out was started, and as the levels lowered, MacFarlane and his men searched the workings and took out the bodies of the dead.

At the end of a gangway they heard voices and there, high up in a breast, were four men. They had been near an air shaft so that they were not smothered when the flood shut off the mine ventilation. They were reduced almost to skeletons when rescued.

A PATIENT GOLFER EXPLODES

Old Bill Jones is a golfer brave and a patient soul is he

When he dubs a shot he may like it not, but a smile is all you'll see. Though some men swear and tear their hair and scatter their clubs about

Old Bill just grins at his golfing sins and silently walks them out.

There are times I've known when old Bill Jones was a strong man sorely tried

But never a word from his lips I heard, though he must have boiled inside.

And I whispered low: "No man can show such marvelous self control;

There will come a day when he'll throw away his everlasting soul."

Old Bill Jones kept his happy grin almost to the season's end.

Good luck or bad he still seemed glad to be out with a golfing friend.

But there came the day, with one hole to play, when a drive meant several pounds.

And Old Bill shot with a mighty swat—and that ball went out of bounds!

He took one look at the hook and turned, like a madman on the tee.

We three stood still and gazed at Bill, for his face was a sight to see

His veins stood out, as he strode about, ere the speech began to flow.

Then he frightened the birds in the trees with words which he wasn't supposed to know.

spoons flour; 3 cups milk; ½ teaspoon salt; ¼ teaspoon paprika.

Melt butter and add flour. Blend and add milk and cook until creamy sauce forms. Stir constantly. Add rest of ingredients. Pour into tomato mixture. Blend and serve at once.

Roast Pork Loaf
4-½ pound roast; 1½ teaspoons salt; ¼ teaspoon paprika; ¼ teaspoon celery salt; 4 tablespoons water.

Wipe roast with damp cloth. Place, fat side down, in a baking pan or roaster and bake 15 minutes in hot oven. Turn roast over and sprinkle with seasonings. Add water. Cover and bake 2½ hours in slow oven. Baste frequently during cooking. Add more water if roast cooks dry.

Gravy
Remove roast from baking pan and pour out fat. Measure 4 tablespoons and return to pan. Add 4 tablespoons of flour and cook slowly and stir constantly until flour has turned a light brown color. Add 2 cups of water and cook until creamy mixture forms. Stir constantly.

Use linseed oil applied on a soft cloth to polish leather traveling bags. This preserves the leather and prevents cracking.

Read The Bible With Us Daily

Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on me hath everlasting life.

I am that bread of life.

Your fathers did eat manna in the wilderness and are dead.

This is the bread which cometh down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof, and not die.

I am the living bread which came down from heaven: if any man eat of this bread, he shall live for ever: and the bread that I will give is my flesh, which I will give for the life of the world.

The Jews therefore strove among themselves, saying, How can this man give us his flesh to eat?

Then Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you.

Whoso eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, hath eternal life; and I will raise him up at the last day.

For my flesh is meat indeed, and my blood is drink indeed.

He that eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, dwelleth in me, and I in him.

As the living Father hath sent me, and I live by the Father; so he that eateth me, even he shall live by me.

This is that bread which came down from heaven: not as your fathers did eat manna, and are dead: he that eateth of this bread shall live for ever.

These things said he in the synagogue, as he taught in Caper-naum.

John 6:47-59.

OLD TOWERS RECALL PAST

Singer Building, With 41 Stories, Was First Skyscraper.

By William Gaines

New York—Yesterday I had occasion to go into the old Singer building for the first time in several years.

Undoubtedly the name stirs memories in your mind of that expansive period which saw the Singer tower grow to be the tallest and most famous office structure in the land. It was the first of the skyscraping giants, completed in 1908.

This was the structure that justified that caricature of the rube from the hinterland, straining his neck till his chin whiskers protruded horizontally, trying to see the top of its 41 stories.

Forty-one stories! What a puny pile that seems in the day of 102-story architecture. But the Singer still is a building of distinction, and a commanding unit in a skyline made up of more than 200 buildings ranging from 25 floors on up. Remember when they closed the Singer observation balcony to keep people from jumping off? Persons with suicidal intent had found it an economical and sure fire method, to pay 50 cents to go up and leap into space.

Tourists visited the Singer tower as religiously as they visited the aquarium in those days. And, though the Metropolitan Life tower topped it a few feet a year or so after its completion, the Singer building held the imagination of the people until an auspicious event in 1913.

That year Woodrow Wilson in the White House pushed a button and illuminated the 60-story Woolworth building.

The Woolworth was to remain the proudest shaft on Manhattan island until the 1930 crop of buildings bloomed, with the Chrysler coming to a point at the top of 77 stories.

Spire Gazing

Since we've started this gazing at the towers about town, here are a few facts which may have slipped your memory:

The home of William Cullen Bryant once stood on the plot now occupied by the Sinclair Oil building. The Equitable was called the most valuable office building in the world until last year, assessed at $21,000,000. Sixteen thousand persons are (or should still be) employed on its 44 floors. And its address, 120 Broadway, is among the most famous of 'em all.

Less than 11 months was required for the wrecking of a 15-story building and the erection of the 70-floor Bank of Manhattan Trust structure. Originally it was estimated the job would take two years, but somebody was in a hurry.

Address, 40 Wall street. John D. Rockefeller's Standard Oil building occupies a site where the celebrated Adelphi hotel stood a hundred years ago.

And, of course, there's the Empire State building, which cost a mere $55,000,000.

Famous Folk

The best day's business for Joseph P. Day, the auctioneer, was $26,000,000. That was way back in '20.

Husky Coach Has "Teacher" For Hurdlers

Seattle (AP).—Since losing his great hurdler Steve Anderson by graduation a year ago, Clarence "Hee" Edmundson, University of Washington track coach, has turned inventor in his efforts to create a capable successor.

Following along behind starting blocks, hand blocks and other modern track equipment, Edmundson has the first and only hurdling "teacher". Edmundson's machine has two up-rights eight feet high with provision made to take care of the hurdle bar at two feet six inches for the low barrier, three feet for the intermediate clearance and three feet six inches for the high stick.

Connecting the top of the up-rights is a cross piece on which is attached a curtain that is adjustable and is raised or lowered according to the height of the hurdle bar. It works like a window shade.

The idea of the curtain is to limit the space above the bar that a hurdler should use in racing over the barriers. Edmundson explained that if the hurdler's head hits the curtain as he clears the bar his form is wrong and he is not carrying his body forward sufficiently.

The Washington coach said he expects his machine to prove of great assistance to his young hurdlers. Anderson, who several times tied the official world's record of 14.25 seconds for the 120-yard high hurdles in his hey-day at Washington, is an assistant track coach under Edmundson, and he has been put in charge of the new apparatus to develop a hurdler to fill his old shoes.

OLD TOWERS RECALL PAST

Singer Building. With 41 Stories. Was First Skyscraper.

By William Gaines
New York—Yesterday I had occasion to go into the old Singer building for the first time in several years.

Undoubtedly the name stirs memories in your mind of that expansion period which saw the Singer tower grow to be the tallest and most famous office structure in the land. It was the first of the skyscraping giants, completed in 1908.

This was the structure that justified that caricature of the rube from the hinterland, straining his neck till his chin whiskers protruded horizontally, trying to see the top of its 41 stories!

Forty-one stories! What a puny pile that seems in the day of 102-story architecture. But the Singer still is a building of distinction, and a commanding unit in a skyline made up of more than 200 buildings ranging from 25 floors on up.

Remember when they closed the Singer observation balcony to keep people from jumping off? Persons with suicidal intent had found it an economical and sure fire method, to pay 50 cents to go up and leap into space.

Tourists visited the Singer tower as religiously as they visited the aquarium in those days. And, though the Metropolitan Life tower topped it a few feet a year or so after its completion, the Singer building held the imagination of the people until an auspicious event in 1913.

That year Woodrow Wilson in the White House pushed a button and illuminated the 60-story Woolworth building.

The Woolworth was to remain the proudest shaft on Manhattan island until the 1930 crop of buildings bloomed, with the Chrysler coming to a point at the top of 77 stories.

Spire Gazing
Since we've started this gazing at the towers about town, here are a few facts which may have slipped your memory:

The home of William Cullen Bry-

ant once stood on the plot now occupied by the Sinclair Oil building. The Equitable was called the most valuable office building in the world until last year, assessed at $31,000,000. Sixteen thousand persons are (or should still be) employed on its 44 floors. And its address, 120 Broadway, is among the most famous of 'em all.

Less than 11 months was required for the wrecking of a 15-story building and the erection of the 70-floor Bank of Manhattan Trust structure. Originally it was estimated the job would take two years, but somebody was in a hurry. Address, 40 Wall street.

John D. Rockefeller's Standard Oil building occupies a site where the celebrated Adelphi hotel stood a hundred years ago.

And, of course, there's the Empire State building, which cost a mere $55,000,000.

Famous Folk
The best day's business for Joseph P. Day, the auctioneer, was $26,000,000. That was way back in '20.

Walter S. Gifford, the telephone man, was born in Salem, Massachusetts.

Re-Union—The annual re-union of the Sunday Schools and congregation of Christ church in this place came off on Thursday night. Notwithstanding the rain there was a general turn out of the congregation. Between two and three hundred persons partook of the bountiful supper provided by the ladies of the congregation. The entire basement, including portions of the section's apartment, was utilized.
The infant school was out in full force, and had the precedence in being served with supper, each of the scholars being also presented with an orange and box of candies.

With Us Daily

Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on me hath everlasting life.

I am that bread of life.

Your fathers did eat manna in the wilderness and are dead.

This is the bread which cometh down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof, and not die.

I am the living bread which came down from heaven: if any man eat of this bread, he shall live for ever: and the bread that I will give is my flesh, which I will give for the life of the world.

The Jews therefore strove among themselves, saying, How can this man give us his flesh to eat?

Then Jesus said unto them,
Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you.

Whoso eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, hath eternal life; and I will raise him up at the last day.

For my flesh is meat indeed, and my blood is drink indeed.

He that eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, dwelleth in me, and I in him.

As the living Father hath sent me, and I live by the Father; so he that eateth me, even he shall live by me.

This is that bread which came down from heaven: not as your fathers did eat manna, and are dead; he that eateth of this bread shall live for ever.

These things said he in the synagogue, as he taught in Caper-naum.

HAMILTONIAN CHURCHES

The Evangelical Lutheran church was organized November 10, 1855.
Following are the names of the original members: John Nunnemaker, Barthas Riey, Maj. John Musselman, Christian Musselman, Jacob Musselman, Julia Ann Hoke, Michael Rugler, George Hull, Sr., Zephaniah Herbert. The names of the pastors the Rev. H. Bishop, 1855; W. V. Gorwald, 1863; E. S. Johnston, 1866-66.

The house of worship was erected in 1854 at a cost of about $2,500. The membership numbers 200. D. R.
Musselman is secretary.

The New Reformed Church of Fairfield was dedicated December 29, 1878. This is modern Gothic, with audience room 55x35 feet and tower 95 feet in height, standing on the site of the old Union Reformed and Presbyterian church erected in 1824, and which was blown down the same year. The second church was built in 1825 and continued in use until 1878. The Presbyterians may hold services in this church until 1888, in consideration of their claims against the old Union building and grounds.

The Methodist Episcopal society was organized about 1827 and worshipped in private houses until 1830, when the first church was erected.

On June 9, 1876, the Centennial Methodist Episcopal church was begun and completed, and dedicated November 30, that year. Up to this period the mission belonged to the Gettysburg Circuit; but since 1876, it has been in the Littlestown charge. The old cemetery in the rear has been removed.

The Catholics of "Carroll's Delight" were accustomed to visit Emmitsburg or Conowingo in very early days; later, missionaries visited their homes, and in 1851 their present church was built. The congregation has not yet a resident pastor, and the church is a mission of the parish of Gettysburg. Here the old Catholic cemetery is still well kept. The Toppers, Dicks, Sanders, Lawlers, and many of the first settlers of "Carroll's Delight" belong to this old mission.

The public school house has been an institution here since 1835. Up to 1872 the building was of a very primitive character, but in that year a pretentious tins brick house was erected. The Sunday schools of the village are well conducted, and are large organizations.

Miscellaneous
There are a few business houses carrying heavy stocks of goods, a first-class hotel, the "Snively House," and a number of pleasant homes.

The ceremony of raising the Union flag at Fairfield took place
April 22, 1861, and the first responses to the call for troops, many then from Hamiltonian township, came in the persons of Dr. A. O.
Scott, Van Buren Tawney, David
Reese, John W. Miller, Joseph

word, for there, from out of the jungle came a lion—the most magnificent, beautiful lion John had ever seen.

The lion's mane hung over his shoulders and as he moved, his body swayed with the grace and ease that seemed to blend with the soft breeze that was blowing and to be a part of the whole scene.

Then the lion stopped and turned his shining, gleaming, yellow eyes on the children.

They stayed very still, although they were not in the least frightened.

"Simba," said the pilot softly, and the lion knew that name, for it was what natives around called him, but he knew that here were his friends.

PETROLE HOPES DEMPSEY
AVOIDS LEADING HEAVIES

Kansas City (AP)—Billy Petrolle, the Fargo Express, thinks so much of Jack Dempsey he hopes the former heavyweight champion doesn't tackle either Jack Sharkey or Max Schmeling in his ring come-back.

"I believe they could take him," Petrolle told friends here. Petrolle has watched Dempsey in several of the latter's recent exhibitions.

HEROIC MINER
DIES ON SUNDAY

Death Recalls Sensational
Rescue Of Four Men
Entombed 21 Days

Hazleton, Feb. 23.—The death of David MacFarlane, 79, at his home here after a long illness Sunday, revived the story of the heroic rescue who on February 25, 1891, brought out four miners entombed for twenty-one days in the Jeanesville mine, the record imprisonment before of mine workers in the hard-coal fields.

MacFarlane was the last survivor of the rescuing party.

Thirteen miners were drowned outright in the Jeaneville disaster, but MacFarlane and his men saved four other men who had been entombed.

MacFarlane was general superintendent when a miner named Charles Boyle, blasted a hole accidentally from his chamber in Jeaneville No. 1 mine into the flooded workings of Jeaneville No.
2, long abandoned mine whose proximity to the No. 1 workings was not suspected, due to No. 3 having been worked long before mine maps were in existence.

A flood of water dashed into the
No. 1 workings, drowned thirteen men and entombed four others, while sixty, among them Boyle, escaped. Pumping the water out was started, and as the levels lowered, MacFarlane and his men searched the workings and took out the bodies of the dead.

At the end of a gangway they heard voices and there, high up in a breast, were four men. They had been near an air shaft so that they were not smothered when the flood shut off the mine ventilation. They were reduced almost to skeletons when rescued.

Just Folks

By
EDGAR A. GUEST

A PATIENT GOLFER EXPLODES
Old Bill Jones is a golfer brave and a patient soul is he.

When he dubs a shot he may like it not, but a smile is all you'll see.
Though some men swear and tear their hair and scatter their clubs about

Old Bill just grins at his golfing sins and silently walks them out.

There are times I've known when old
"Bill" Jones was a strong man soberly tried

But never a word from his lips I heard, though he must have boiled inside.

And I whispered low: "No man can show such marvelous self control;

There will come a day when he'll throw away his everlasting soul."

Old Bill Jones kept his happy grin almost to the season's end.
Good luck or bad he still seemed glad to be out with a rolling friend.

But there came the day, with one hole to play, when a drive meant several pounds.

And Old Bill, shot with a mighty swat, and that ball went out of bounds!

He took one look at the hook and turned, like a madman on the tee.

We three stood still and gazed at Bill, for his face was a sight to see.

His veins stood out, as he strode about, ere the speech began to flow.

Then he frightened the birds in the trees with words which he wasn't supposed to know.

Changes Allegiance

Gen. Mah Chan-Shan, a few months ago the defender of Manchuria and China's national hero, is now the governor of one of the "three eastern provinces" of Manchuria under Japanese tutelage.

does Walter Brown, the postmaster general, who is slated to become party chairman after the conventions.

These are only a few of the many.

Avoid Early Primaries

With the indicated support already far past the simple convention majority needed to renominate, it is easy to see why the president's name has been withheld from the early primaries, like those in North Dakota and Illinois.

Whenever an open primary fight is necessary to capture a state delegation it means the candidate must line up with one local faction or another. Many embarrassing complications have emerged from such alliances.

Besides, in North Dakota, the insurgents might have made things very uncomfortable for Mr. Hoover, and in Illinois the primary choice is not binding on the delegates.

With so many birds in the hand, argue the Hoover men, it is wisest to leave the bramble bushes alone.

SOUTHERN BASEBALL HEAD WRITES FICTION ON SIDE

Memphis, Tenn. (AP).—When office cares are forgotten, John D. Martin, lawyer and president of the Southern baseball association, turns his hand to short story writing.

For several years he has spent his off hours dictating his stories to his stenographer.

Most of Martin's stories are humorous ones dealing with baseball. He writes under a pen name, kept secret from even his close friends, and he hopes sometime to be an established star writer. Now, he says, he has stories in the leading magazines once in a while.

Washington
Highlights

By Herbert Plummer

Washington — Punctuality — that cardinal point in the code of every soldier — put the country's greatest in a rather embarrassing situation the other night, but because of no fault of his own.

General Pershing was two hours late to President Hoover's annual White House reception to army and navy officers. But as far as "Black Jack" is concerned, he considers himself exceedingly lucky that he was there at all.

The rigors of war perhaps caused the general no more anxiety than he suffered that evening. He laughs about it now — tells the story as a good joke on himself, but it was no laughing matter at the time.

Here's the story as Pershing tells it:
For the past few weeks he has been sitting for a portrait by Seymour Stone which will hang in the Army and Navy club of New York.

Decorations Missing
At the last sitting the artist requested the general to send him his decorations that he might add them to the portrait. Pershing did so.

He forgot all about them until time for the presidential reception. A hurry call to Stone's apartment found the artist absent. His request that he be permitted to enter the apartment in quest of his decorations was granted.

But they were nowhere in evidence. Pershing by this time getting a bit panicky, tried to locate Stone. Finally he was informed the artist was at a downtown movie.

Aids were dispatched to the theater, but they arrived too late. Stone had left.

After more nerve-racking moments, the artist by accident was discovered in the lobby of Pershing's own club — the Metropolitan — where the general makes his home.

It developed that he was looking for Pershing.

Better Late Than Never
Then followed a mad dash back to Stone's apartment for the decorations.

"I soon — saw why I didn't find them on my first visit," said Pershing. "Stone had locked them in a strong trunk and then placed the trunk in a securely barred closet."

After hastily pinning them on his breast, the general hot-footed it to the White House.

ORRTANNA

So Many
We were established in 1898; so many years have passed since then that it is only natural to assume that ours must be an experienced and perfected service.
And this is a correct assumption. Our service shows, in its every aspect, the influence of those many years of experience.
